FIGHT ON HUERTA TO CONTINUE, DESPITE ANY PEACE ATTEMPT

Commander-in-Chief of Mexican Constitutionalists Declares Internal Warfare Will Not End

PRESIDENT'S ABDICATION ALONE WILL HALT REVOLT

Intervention of United States Will Not Affect Carranza, Who Will Fight to a Finish

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Venustiano Carranza, governor of the state of Coahuila and commander-in-chief of the Mexican Constitutionalists, has sent the following answer in reply to a message from the Times here, asking him whether he would agree to stop fighting if John Lind, President Wilson's personal emissary, should request the Huerta government to cease hostilities until the October election was held:

"Answering your message, I say to you that I do not recognize the Huerta administration as a legally constituted government, for which reason the obligations incurred with my comrades in arms in the just defense of our constitutional rights cause us to continue the campaign that has been begun, until it is finished."

Federal Train Is Blown Up and Soldiers Killed

CONSTITUTIONAL FIELD HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 8.—The blowing up of a federal troop train near Laspasos and the killing and wounding of many soldiers on August 4 was officially reported here today. The report came by courier from Lieutenant Colonel Elizindo, commanding a force of constitutionalists operating along the railroad line between Laredo, Tex., and Monterey, Mexico. He said he did not know the number of dead, but that it was reported sixty federal wounded had been taken to Lampasos. Constitutionalists are reported to occupy Pantaferth and San Geronimo, the latter a few miles from Monterey.

Senator Charges Rebel Junta Influences U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Mexican situation bobbed up in the senate again today when Senator Smith, of Michigan, declared that S. G. Hopkins, a Washington lawyer, as representative of the constitutionalist forces, "had the ear of the state department," and "had much to do with the removal of Ambassador Wilson."

Senator Williams, of Mississippi, declared today he believed an organized effort was being made to bring war with Mexico.

"My deliberate opinion, there is now an organized and syndicated effort to bring about war between the United States and Mexico," said he, "organized with a lobby here and organized and syndicated through newspapers with money behind it and not all of it Mexican money."

Wilson Allows Arms to Be Shipped to Mexico

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—On representation that should the fight and water-power supply of Mexico City be damaged all the foreigners in the city would suffer, President Wilson has granted a permit for the shipment of three rapid fire guns and 50,000 rounds of ammunition to the Mexican Light and Power company. The request for a permit for the shipment was made through the New York representative of the company.

The steamer Monterey, sailing from New York yesterday, carried a consignment of 145 cases of carbines for the Huerta commandant at Vera Cruz and about a week ago the steamer Mexico took 850 cases of ammunition and 125 cases of arms to the same place.

It is said here that these shipments have been made under a permit issued June 25, to the Huerta government for the exportation of 10,000 rifles and 5,000,000 cartridges. Small portions have been going forward from time to time.

No permit has been issued since that date but the Mexican embassy has presented several applications to the state department, which have remained unacted upon. This is taken to indicate that President Wilson for the present at least intends to carry out his policy of denying munitions of war to both factions.

Wilson Calls Conference On Situation in Mexico

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Wilson will meet the foreign relations committees at the White House tonight for a conference on the Mexican situation. The entire membership of ten Democrats and seven Republicans was asked to be present.

LIND TO GO NEAR VERA CRUZ.

John Lind, President Wilson's personal envoy to Mexico, will arrive off Vera Cruz on the battleship New Hampshire before night. He probably will not be in Mexico City before Monday and the diplomatic crisis between the United States and Mexico is not expected to culminate before that time.

The next development in the situation is expected when Mr. Lind, through Charge O'Shaughnessy, presents to Provisional President Huerta President Wilson's proposals to bring about peace. These will be published simultaneously in Washington and Mexico City and at the same time will be transmitted as a matter of information to the powers of the world.

PROBERS WILL ASK IMPEACHMENT FOR GOVERNOR SULZER

Chairman Framley and Counselor of Investigating Committee Say That Is Only Course for Them

NEW YORK CHIEF SILENT BEFORE ACCUSATIONS

Report to Legislature Will Declare Sulzer Speculated in Stock Market With Campaign Funds

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—While Governor Sulzer remains silent, the legislative committee, which concluded its hearings here yesterday, began today drafting a report which it will submit to the legislature on Monday with reference to testimony adduced showing that the governor had speculated in the New York stock market, using campaign funds which he failed to include in his sworn statement as required by law.

In the opinion of Chairman Frawley, of the committee, and of Eugene Lambrichards, counsel, no other course than to recommend impeachment proceedings is open to investigators.

Never in the history of New York state has a governor been impeached.

Should such a fate await Mr. Sulzer he would be put on trial before the senate and the state court of appeals sitting jointly. The court is now in recess and will not convene until September 29.

NEWSPAPER STORY DID HARDEMAN INJUSTICE

Representative From Jefferson Declares He Is Satisfied With Present Prohibition Law

Arising to a point of personal privilege on the floor of the house Saturday morning, Representative S. B. Hardeman, of Jefferson, called attention to a newspaper article, the wording of which made it appear that he had been a member of a reported pact among the prohibitionists gotten together for the sole purpose of defeating the so-called administration measures amendatory to the general tax act that were introduced by Speaker W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, at the suggestion of Governor John M. Slaton.

Mr. Hardeman made it plain that he was allied with neither "wets" nor "drys" but on the other hand was a conservative and had expressed himself on several occasions as being satisfied with the law as it now stands and in favor of neither an effort to repeal it or change it in any manner. He denied that there was any line-up, so far as he could see to defeat the administration and declared that he had voted for every administration measure.

It is a fact as the records will show, that the gentleman from Jefferson strongly supported both of the tax measures introduced by the speaker and stood squarely behind him during the fight on the floor of the lower house.

The only tax measure that Mr. Hardeman voted against was that of Mr. Fullbright, of Burke, providing for an extra ad valorem tax levy of one mill. On this question he explained his position by saying that the members of the house had been given four different opportunities to increase the revenue of the state by tax reform and had failed to do so. For that reason he was not in favor of adding anything to the ad valorem tax.

Mr. Hardeman has always been consistent in his position not to change the present prohibition law but to leave it as it is, which fact is known to every Georgian conversant with the politics of the state.

"Please Send Us Daddy" Begged Babies; Blease Paroles Long-Termer

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 9.—"Governor, please send us daddy," wrote the two little tots of David A. Kinard, of Bamberg, to Governor Blease this morning in a letter accompany their photographs. One was a little girl two years old and one a little boy four years of age.

"Daddy" was in the penitentiary for ten years for killing another mill operative, William Marvin, in Bamberg last spring.

The governor acceded to the request of the children, and sent "daddy" back home with a parole in his pocket.

ROSALIE JONES' FATHER A SUICIDE, POLICE SAY

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Dr. Oliver Livingston Jones, a wealthy retired physician and father of "General" Rosalie Jones, a suffragette leader, died in a hospital today of self-inflicted bullet wounds.

The police have recorded the case as one of suicide, although members of the family insist that it was accidental.

O'NEAL FAVORS SPECIAL SENATORIAL ELECTION

Alabama Governor Believes He Has the Authority to Call One

(By Associated Press.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 9.—Governor O'Neal declared today that he is still of the opinion that he is authorized by law to call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston.

"The authority for the election exists in an Alabama statute which says that vacancies in office created by death shall be filled by special election," said Governor O'Neal. "I could issue a proclamation Monday for a special election and have a senator elected by September 15, the date on which I understand the tariff bill will come up for passage. A Democratic primary would be useless in case I order an election. There is no danger of a Republican being elected. Their vote is inappreciable."

Governor O'Neal will leave tonight for Birmingham to attend the funeral of Senator Johnston. He will probably reach no definite conclusion until he has conferred with the members of the Alabama delegation attending the funeral.

GRAFT POLICEMAN LEAVES BUT $10.32

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Captain Thomas W. Walsh, of the police department, who died last June shortly after he had confessed to District Attorney Whitman that he had participated in the graft paid to police officials for protection, left an estate amounting only to $10.32, as far as shown in his will, which was filed yesterday. He possessed no realty, only the sum named in bank deposits.

CHURCH TO CELEBRATE SEVENTY-SECOND YEAR

Groverville Baptists Will Hold "Home-Coming Day" in Honor of Anniversary

QUITMAN, Ga., Aug. 9.—Old Liberty church, at Groverville, in this county, will celebrate the seventy-second anniversary of its founding with a "home coming day" next Saturday, August 16. An invitation has been issued to every person who is or has been a member of this church, or has any associations with its history, to be present.

One of the chief features will be an address by Rev. J. M. Rushin, of Boston, on the "History of Liberty Church Since Its Earliest Days." Judge J. G. McCall of Quitman will follow with an address on the history of the Baptist church in south Georgia.

WHISKY MANUFACTURER IS KILLED BY HIS WIFE

Spencer, N. C., Coroner's Jury Exonerates Mrs. H. Clay Grubb

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SPENCER, N. C., Aug. 9.—H. Clay Grubb came to his death at the hands of his wife, Mrs. Emma Grubb, who acted in self defense and who was justifiable in the act, was the verdict of a coroner's jury impaneled today to investigate the killing of Mr. Grubb today.

The tragedy occurred at the Grubb home at Churchland, near Spencer, at 10 a. m., when Mrs. Grubb fired three bullets in the body of her husband while he was attempting to beat her. She was seriously cut in the neck, one ear being almost severed and many severe bruises inflicted in the body. Her condition is still critical. The husband is said to have been drinking when he attacked her.

Grubb was one of the wealthiest business men in this section of the state, being a whisky manufacturer. He is survived by a wife and seven children.

WITNESS IN MIDST OF DORSEY'S GRILLING WHEN COURT ADJOURNS UNTIL NINE O'CLOCK ON MONDAY

Assistant Factory Superintendent Refutes Testimony of C. B. Dalton and Jim Conley That Frank Frequently Had Women Callers in His Office on Saturday Afternoons and During Holidays—He Says He Never Saw Conley There Saturday Afternoons

DECLARES THAT WIFE OF THE ACCUSED FREQUENTLY CALLED ON HUSBAND AT HIS OFFICE ON SATURDAYS

Attorney Arnold Registers Another Objection Against Laughter of Spectators in the Court Room—Solicitor Draws From Schiff Change of Answers Made to Several Previous Statements of His While on the Witness Stand

The second week of the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan ended at 12:30 o'clock Saturday when court adjourned until 9 o'clock Monday morning. Herbert Schiff, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil factory was on the stand for the defense at the hour of adjournment and will resume under cross-examination by Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday. During the cross questioning of Schiff, he and the solicitor had many tilts regarding the system of the factory office and were frequently interrupted by objections from Attorney Arnold for the defense. The solicitor put Frank's assistant through a grilling examination during the course of which he caused the witness to change several answers he had previously made to the jury.

That Jim Conley, the negro sweeper who accuses Frank, feared the crowd gathered in front of the pencil factory following the murder of Mary Phagan and that the negro declared that he would give a million dollars if he had a white skin, was the declaration of Schiff, earlier during his testimony. Schiff also declared that the financial sheet made out in Frank's handwriting on April 26 was accurate and the handwriting of the accused superintendent was normal. Schiff works with Leo M. Frank in the office and assists in making up the weekly financial sheets.

He refuted the stories told by the negro Conley and C. B. Dalton that Frank frequently had women in the office on Saturday afternoons. Schiff declared that he had missed very few Saturday afternoons in the office since June, 1912, until January of this year and during that time no women except the accused's wife visited the office during the Saturday afternoons.

George Minar, a newspaper reporter, was on the stand a short while prior to Schiff's testimony and declared that when he interviewed George Epps, the newsboy that the "newsie" failed to tell him that he had seen Mary Phagan since the Thursday preceeding the tragedy.

NEWSBOY CALLED.

Leo M. Frank, the accused, breakfasted early with his wife as usual in one of the rooms adjoining the court, Saturday morning, while the hundreds waited outside in a long line to gain admittance to the court. Ten minutes before court was due to convene, the lawyers and the judge were there and everything was ready for the trial to resume at 9 o'clock.

George Epps, the newsboy whose testimony that he accompanied Mary Phagan to town when she came to her death at the National Pencil factory has been attacked by the defense, was called to the stand as the first witness. Several efforts Friday to locate him proved unavailing. It being said that he was about his usual business of selling papers on the streets. The defense subpoened him. C. B. Dalton was called before Epps, but did not answer.

Barefooted and coatless, the towheaded newsboy walked again to the witness stand.

"Do you remember the Sunday the body was found?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

"Do you remember Mr. Minar, a newspaper man, coming out there that night and talking to you and your sister?"

"Yes."

"Didn't he ask you and your sister when was the last time you saw Mary Phagan, and didn't your sister say Thursday?"

"I won't there then. I was in the house, but I didn't stay where he was talking."

"Well, weren't you there when he asked that question?"

"No, my father was there but I was not."

"That's all," said Mr. Arnold.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness.

"Have you ever refused to come to this court when you were called?"

PLAYING BALL YESTERDAY.

"No, whenever you send for me I come right straight."

"Why weren't you here yesterday?"

"I got tired waiting, and you said you'd send for me if I was needed, and when they went out to the house for me I was out playing ball."

"Did you call me last night?"

Mr. Arnold interrupted, saying that was not a proper question. Mr. Dorsey replied that Mr. Arnold had tried to leave the jury under the impression that this boy had run away and had refused to come to court when summoned. The question was not allowed, however, by Judge Roan. Epps was released, and John Minar, a reporter on the Atlanta Georgian, was called to the stand.

"Were you a reporter for the Georgian in April, Mr. Minar?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"I was."

"Do you recall the finding of the body of little Mary Phagan on April 27?"

"Yes."

"During that day did you go to the Epps home in an endeavor to see little George Epps?"

"I did."

"What time did you go?"

"About 8 o'clock."

"Did you see this little boy and his sister?"

"I did."

"Did you attempt to get out of them—"

Solicitor Dorsey interrupted, objecting to any testimony as to what the sister said, inasmuch as she had not been brought into the case. The judge allowed the question, however.

"Did you ask them as to the last time either one of them had seen Mary Phagan?"

"I asked them who had seen her last. The girl said she had seen her on the previous Thursday."

"When did George Epps say he saw her?"

"The boy said he saw her occasionally going to work in the mornings."

"Did he say anything about seeing her Saturday?"

"He did not."

"What was the last time that either one of them said they saw this little girl Mary Phagan?"

"Thursday."

"Did he claim or breathe a thing about seeing her after Thursday?"

"He did not."

Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness.

HERBERT SCHIFF CALLED.

Harllee Branch, a reporter of The Atlanta Journal, was called, but was not in court at the moment.

Herbert Schiff was called as the next witness. He was assistant superintendent at the pencil factory when the murder was committed.

"Are you the assistant superintendent at the National Pencil factory?"

"I have worked there in several capacities."

"In what capacity were you working "I was assisting Mr. Frank."

"What were your duties?"

ATHENS EX-MAYOR DIES AT HIS COUNTRY HOME

Asbury Hull Hodgson, Prominent Business Man, Succumbs After Long Illness

Mr. Asbury Hull Hodgson, of Athens, Ga., died suddenly last night at his home at Dillard, Ga., where he had gone with the hope of recuperating. He had been in feeble health for the past few years and his death was not unexpected by the members of his family.

Mr. Hodgson was one of the most successful business men of Athens, where he had lived all his life and had accumulated a large fortune. He was most active in the work of upbuilding his home town, being at the time of his death a member of the firm of Hodgson Brothers, president of the Southern Manufacturing company, one of the largest cotton mills in the state, and was largely interested in many other concerns.

He was a steward of the Methodist church and always gave liberally to charities. Before his death he helped to organize the Hodgson Trust company, for the purpose of giving away money.

He leaves seven brothers, E. R. Hodgson, T. A. Hodgson, J. M. Hodgson, Captain A. C. Hodgson (United States navy), George T. Hodgson, Colonel F. G. Hodgson (United States army), and F. M. Hodgson; his wife, Mrs. Sallie Palmer Hodgson; three children, Frank, Henry and Asbury Hull Hodgson, Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. Julie Hodgson McNeil and Miss Lill Hodgson. The burial will take place in Athens on Sunday at noon.

SCOUTS ACT AS ESCORT AT STANLEY'S FUNERAL

Young Victim of Lightning Bolt Suffered the Severest Injuries Internally

The funeral of John Stanley, son of Commissioner of Labor H. M. Stanley, who was killed by lightning in Dublin Thursday afternoon, was held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the chapel of Harry G. Poole. The interment followed in West View cemetery.

Young Stanley was a member of the Boy Scouts of Decatur and that body formed his guard of honor and acted as the pallbearers.

Upon close examination of the body by physicians it was revealed that the internal effects were much more serious than the external injuries received from the bolt. The lightning left few signs on the skin but the bones on the upper part of the body were badly twisted and disarranged.

Almost the whole force of the bolt went through the right side and all the injuries were on that side of the body. Burns in the flesh were found on the head, shoulder, thigh and foot of the right side. The bolt burst through the shoe, tearing it open as would have an explosive. None of the skin burns were bad and were hardly larger than half an inch. The internal organs were so badly torn up that the undertaker was unable to use the embalming fluid.

The lightning struck the boy out in an open field, far from a fence or tree. He was carring no gun. When he was found he was lying on his face, his arms pinned under his body.

MANUFACTURERS TO PLAN MONDAY FOR EXPOSITION

All the manufacturers' committees interested in the establishment of the permanent exhibit in the chamber of commerce building will hold a general meeting Monday at noon at the chamber of commerce.

At that time final plans for the exhibit will be perfected, and reports will be read from all the committees.

The response to the movement has proven encouraging, and W. H. Leahy, acting secretary of the chamber, says that there is now no doubt of the successful outcome of the effort to establish the exhibit.

ASKS POLICE TO FIND HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

W. W. Mills, who lives at the Fairlie apartments, 137 Spring street, and whose business address is with the Southern Book Concern at 71 Whitehall, has notified the police of the disappearance of his wife, Mrs. Edna E. Mills, and six-year-old daughter.

Mills believes that they have gone with a woman friend who lived at the Fairlie apartments to Charlotte, N. C. He can give no reason for their leaving but states that when he went home Thursday night they were not ther. He said that he had not been home for seeveral nights previous to Thursday.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Swift Has Distinction of Winning First Tax Fight.

Out of the welter of tax measures that have been introduced in the house during this session, but one has survived. Others were mercilessly killed in their attempt to reach the senate for consideration.

The credit for this goes to Representative H. H. Swift, of Muscogee, who got his inheritance tax measure through in great style. Less than fifteen votes were cast against it. And it may be said in passing that Mr. Swift is one of the new members who never lectslated before, though no one would be inclined to believe that he is new at the game after seeing him unwind on the floor of the lower assembly.

He is an Alex Stephens in size, to begin with, and not unlike the great statesman in a few other ways, which is no small distinction. The house long ago recognized his worth as a leader and his help is sought in all matters of vital interest to the state. He is a forceful speaker and quite the quickest at repartee, of which there is an abundance at all times.

The gentleman from Muscogee is also one of the few men in the house who can command its attention at all times. Sincerity is is main asset, which coupled with good, hard common sense, would indicate that it is no more than natural that his bill passed by a tremendous majority while the others were killed outright.

Lumpkin Huntsmen Get Right to Kill Squirrels.

They can kill squirrels, gray and fox, in Lumpkin county now, unless the governor exercises his veto on a local bill, which seems hardly likely.

The bill was introduced by Representative Brookshear, of Lumpkin, and passed the senate Friday morning. It amends an act giving the citizens of White, Union and Habersham the right to kill squirrels during certain months in the year, and includes Lumpkin in the list.

Under the present game law the citizens of these four counties cannot pot the pelt of the scuriidae during the closed months of the year. This law gives them hunting rights during some of the open months as well as the closed months, when crops are being pillaged by the little animals.

As a Commissioner of Drugs, Hollberg Thinks Broyles a Bear.

She other day when the house was in an uproar over the passage of the drug commissioner bill which was eventually defeated, all sorts of arguments were brought forth pro and con. The bill was for the enforcement of the drug laws in regard to the sale of narcotics, stimulants and "dope," and provided for an inspector to have jurisdiction over the sale of such medicines.

Representative C. F. Hollberg, of the Coweta delegation, led the fight against the measure and finally succeeded in killing it. He declared, such a law would be unconstitutional in that it was class legislation.

"Why," said Mr. Hollberg, "the bill would give the commissioner of drugs more power than the governor. If the people down in Savannah and elsewhere can't enforce their drug laws, let them get a Judge Broyles. He can do it."

The Senator from the Fifteenth Would Have Stuck to His Guns

Cupid has a rough road to travel when dealing with the state senate. The little god of love seems to have made up his mind to appropriate the gallery of the senate as his special trysting-place. Daily here can be seen couples who appear more interested in each other than the question as to whether the act creating a board of commisioners of roads and revenues for Dooly county shall be amended.

All went well with the Cupid of the solons until Senator Smith sat up and took notice. First he caused one of his fellow-members much embarrassment by introducing a resolution calling the attention of the senators to his juxtaposition to a bunch of sweetness upstairs.

Then Senator Allen took a hand. It was Friday morning. She had come into the gallery unnoticed by any save one. Forgetting his duty to his paper, this one deserted the press table and hastened to join her. They sat together, "side by side," her eyes on his, his eyes on hers.

Suddenly the voice of the clerk boomed out. Senator John T. Allen had introduced a resolution of personal privilege.

"Resolved," read the clerk, "That Hon. Clark Howell, Jr., the distinguished reporter, be requested to come down from the gallery, report progress, and notify the senate if he desires to sit again."

All eyes turned upward. They saw a blue dress, a black hat, and two little hands held up to a pretty face. But she was alone. The recreant reporter had fled.

Suggs, a Scrapper who Can Scrap With the Very Best of Them.

When the house was "kickin' the Lipscomb tax bill aroun'" to the consummate delight of the minority crowd of the ways and means committee, said kickin' serving to remove every vestige of legislation embodied in the measure save the caption and the repealing clause there was one member of the majority who said he would just be ding-dinged if he would turn around and support the substitute when the others did in order to secure something that looked like a law for the senate to build on to.

That member was Representative G. L. Suggs, of Haralson ,a dyed-in-the-wool farmer, who stood for the state board of equalizers or nothing. Such was his attitude in the committee room when the ways and means bunch was split several different ways and then some. Mr. Suggs commenced the fight there and he kept it up until the bill went to the house as he wanted it. He neither gave nor asked for quarter. He thought the people of Georgia should pay share and share alike toward the upkeep of the state, and he told' em so on the floor of the house when the big scrap was on. As was the case in the committee room, the gentleman from Haralson never let up but was always to be found in the midst of the hottest debate, fully able to take care of himself and the position he had maintained from the outset.

As the saying goes he died at his post, theoretically of course, because he is still very much alive and is loaded for the enemy when the measure comes back from the senate loaded down with amendments.

Then He Voted With Outstretched Hand.

When you don't hear the question put and don't know what it is, why, asked to be excused from voting. That is the way Senator Fred Kea looks at it, and it would have been all right of Senator O. H. Elkins hadn't looked at it the other way.

The senate was voting on the passage of local bills Friday morning when one came up which amended the constitution so that the judge of the superior court of Bibb county got a raise in salary. In accordance with the rule the "ayes" and "nays" were called.

So it was that Senator Kea, engaged in a very interesting conversation in the rear, was surpised to hear his name called. He asked to be excused from voting.

"I object" shouted Senator Elkins, and the clerk had to state the question so the senator from the Sixteenth could cast his vote.

FULTON'S DELEGATION BEGINS FIGHT ON FEES

They Would Abolish Fee System in Counties of 100,000 Population

A bill, indorsed by several grand juries and by the Fulton county commissioners, to abolish the fee system of remuneration of county officers in counties of 100,000 population or over, was introduced in the house Saturday morning by Representatives Smith and Blackburn, of Fulton, by request.

The measure provides that in lieu of fees the following scale of annual salaries shall be adopted:

Ordinaries, clerks of the superior court and sheriffs, $5,000.

Treasurers, $3,500.

Tax receivers, $4,000.

Tax collectors, $5,000.

It is further provided that the state and county shall each pay half of the salaries.

Dog Wagon Starts On Monday Morning: Is Your Dog Tagged?

Monday morning the "dog wagon" will start in heartless canine crusade through Atlanta's streets and that puzzling question, "What der yer mean you lost your dog?" will at last receive a satisfactory answer, or answers, for this is to be a thorough dog cleaning.

Of course it will go hard on the dogs, but it will be harder on you if your pet poodle hasn't a tag when the dog catcher pops his head around the corners. So everybody who respects their dog had best go down to the city clerk's office and buy that poor dog a tag.

The tags themselves are unique. A dog's head being so arranged that it forms the numerals "13" on the little brass disk. The dog would surely be pleased with this besides, it would save the city a little chloroform, this being the mode in vogue at the pound for disposing of the ownerless pups.

Clerk Walter Taylor announces that there will be no favors granted and that a Pommeranian won't be shown any more courtesies than a tail-canned cur. Besides he won't have near the chances of escape that the world wise cur has acquired in knocking about for his daily "grub."

NATIONAL SUFFRAGISTS MEET IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Suffragists from throughout the United States are gathering here to attend the conference Wednesday of the National Council of Women Voters. Mrs. Emma Smith Devoe, president of the organization, arrived today.

The conference will extend through Thursday and Friday and will be executive, except for a mass meeting in a local theater Friday evening, at which Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, will be the principal speaker.

GREATEST RADIO STATION TO BE BUILT AT PANAMA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—One of the greatest naval radio stations in the world and eclipsing in size the new station at Arlington, Va., is to be constructed by the United States at Caimito, in the Canal zone. It will be known as the Darien Radio station, and where only one of the Arlington towers reaches the height of 600 feet, all three of the towers at Darien will be that high.

To The Young Expectant Mother

Women of Experience Advise the Use of Mother's Friend.

There is some trepidation in the minds of most women in regard to motherhood. The longing to possess is often contradicted by the fear of distress.

But there need be no such dread in view of the fact that we have an effective remedy in what is known as Mother's Friend. This is an external application that has a wonderful influence and control over the muscular tissues of the abdomen. By its daily use the muscles, cords, tendons and ligaments all gently expand without the slightest strain; there is no pain, no nausea, no nervousness; what was dreaded as a severe physical ordeal becomes a calm, serene, joyful anticipation.

In almost every community there are women who have used Mother's Friend, and they are the ones to be recovered quickly.

Mother's Friend is prepared after the formula of a noted family doctor by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 258 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write them for their instructive book to expectant mothers. You will find Mother's Friend on sale by all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle.

Dr. J. T. Gault

Specialist in diseases of men. 22 1-2 S. Broad St., Room 32 Inman building, Atlanta, Georgia.

For the past nine years I have been located in Atlanta and have devoted my entire time and attention to the treating and curing of special diseases of men. I have never let anything appear in my advertisement that I could not accomplish, and for this reason I have gained a reputation excelled by no other specialists in this line of work. I have demonstrated that a doctor may advertise and yet stand well in the profession, provided he is truthful, well equipped and able to give the best of treatment. If you suffer from any of those diseases peculiar to men and desire honest, conscientious treatment for your case, call and see me. There will be no charge for a thorough examination and all transactions are satisfactory and confidential. I am successor to Dr. Hathaway & Company, so long established in Atlanta. Office hours 9 to 1, 2 to 7. Sunday 10 to 12 o'clock only. (Advt.)

MISS EDMONDSON DROWNS IN WRIGHTSVILLE SURF

Roy Walraven, Also of Atlanta, Makes Futile Effort to Save Her

Miss Ethel Edmondson, of 343 Jackson avenue, was drowned Friday while in surf bathing at Wrightsville Beach, North Carolina.

Roy Walraven, also of Atlanta, according to telegraph reports, made a gallant effort to save her and risked his own life in bringing her to shore. But all efforts at resuscitation were in vain.

The accident occurred at 6:30 o'clock in the evening. Miss Edmondson had arrived only a few hours before and although the surf was so rough as to deter other bathers from going in, she was anxious to dip in the surf and braved the waves accompanied by Mr. Walraven. She had been in only a few minutes when a huge wave hit her and dragged her under.

Miss Edmondson was twenty-four years of age and had been employed by the Wester Music company as stenographer for more than a year. She was a member of the Grace Methodist church. She lived with her mother, Mrs. S. P. Fincher.

Mr. Walraven lives at 151 Ashby street. They were of a party of seven who left Atlanta Thursday evening for a ten days' outing at the beach.

LOCAL BILL CAUSES ARGUMENT IN HOUSE

Members From Same County in Wordy Row Over Passage of New Act

The second conflict on the floor of the house over the passage of a local bill came during the period of unanimous consent Saturday morning when Representatives J. Frank Rhodes and Frank A. Lipscomb of Clarke clashed on the question of whether or not their county commissioners should be elected by the people or appointed by the grand jury.

The bone of contention was the bill of Mr. Rhodes to change the manner of election of the commissioners so as to make them elective by the people, the measure being amended by a referendum clause leaving the final enactment in the hands of the people. It was passed by the vote of 106 to 12.

Before balloting, the author of the bill called attention to the fact that 1,000 citizens of Clarke county had signed a petition asking that the commissioners be elected by popular vote and he, therefore, wanted the matter to be left in their hands.

Mr. Lipscomb, in opposition to the measure which had the committee's favorable report, declared that he was against it because it would throw the county into a political strife.

SEEKS TO HOLD $9,000 HUSBAND HAS IN BANK

Mrs. Lenora M. Gorham filed a petition in superior court Friday asking a divorce from Ernest B. Gorham, alleging that Gorham deserted her after fourteen years of married life, for another woman, whose name is given in the bill.

Mrs. Gorham also asks that $9,000 in money and notes in the Third National bank be withheld from the possession of her husband, and she asks that reasonable alimony be given her. Mrs. Gorham also took an action in trover to recover a $175 diamond ring from the other woman, which she alleges her husband took by force from her.

Mr. Gorham lives in the South Bend district. Attorneys Bishop & Cornwell filed the suit.

GOVERNMENT IN NEED OF MORE STENOGRAPHERS

COMPULSORY EDUCATION BILL PASSES SENATE

Senator Sweat's Measure Is Adopted By Upper House By 27 to 11.

The compulsory education bill introduced by Senator Sweat, of the Fifth district, passed the senate Friday afternoon by a vote of 27 to 11, and was immediately sent to the house. Its discussion occupied much of the morning session and was taken up in the afternoon and after several speeches was put to a vote. The bill is not drastic, but provides that under certain conditions compulsory education shall not be forced.

At the same session Senator B. S. Miller introduced the bill which was killed in the house and which provides for a tax of 1 mill in addition to the 5 mills now levied to be imposed in the year 1915, and an additional tax of 1-2 mill to the present 5 mills for the year 1916, for the payment of the common school deficit.

CENTAUR COMPANY WINS INJUNCTION SUIT

WISCONSIN PHARMACAL COMPANY IS RESTRAINED FROM USING WRAPPERS.

A permanent injunction restraining the Wisconsin Pharmacal company from imitating the wrappers used by the Centaur company of New York, manufacturer of "Fletcher's Castoria," was granted by Judge F. A. Geiger in United States district court.

The complainant company charged the local concern with using wrappers which infringed upon their copyright for the labels of their well known preparation. The judge upheld its claim and ordered the defendants to pay damages of $200 as well as the costs of the action.

The decision handed down by Judge Geiger applies to between 400 and 500 Wisconsin retail druggists who are stockholders in the defendant company.—Milwaukee, Wis., "News."

By Mr. Strickland of Pierce—To prevent seining for fish above tide water for a term of five years.

By Mr. Holtzclaw of Houston—To regulate the running of trains over public crossings.

BILLS PASSED.

The following local bills were passed in the house Saturday morning:

By Mr. Shipp of Pulaski—To create the office of commissioner of roads and revenues for Pulaski county.

By Mr. Neal of Gordon—To revoke the charter of Ranger.

By Mr. Spence of Mitchell—To amend an act creating the Mitchell county commissioners.

By Mr. Rhodes of Clarke—To make the Clarke county commissioners elective by the people.

By Mr. Hammack of Randolph and Mr. Slater of Bryan—To appropriate $20,000 for the department of entomology.

By Messrs. Smith and Blackburn of Fulton (by request)—To abolish the fee system of paying county officers in counties of over 100,000 population.

By Messrs. Wimberly of Bibb and Kimbrough of Harris—To appropriate $7,500 for the chemical department of the department of agriculture.

By Mr. Booker of Wilkes—To appropriate $10,000 to the department of agriculture for its maintenance.

MAKES FORTUNE ON 25 CENT INVESTMENT

Almost every family has some member who suffers with indigestion and it will interest them to know that a young English singer who had spent a fortune consulting the best doctors in Europe, bought a vegetable which was recommended by a celebrated French doctor as having wonderful digestive properties, for 25 cents and made up a sauce with it and discovered that he had accidently prepared a most delicious sauce which added zest and flavor to food, and at the same time acted as a wonderful digestive. Cooks at the best European hotels pronounce it unexcelled. Unlike all other sauces, Waw-Waw (an obsolete South American Indian word for vegetable), A 25 cent bottle from your grocer will convince you how much more you will enjoy your food by adding Waw-Waw Sauce and how easily you can digest anything and everything.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 73

Children of Georgia

"And they all with one consent began to make Excuse"

Luke 14:18

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritical phrases, as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, today, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him, who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We cannot give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever be the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say so frankly; but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a reformatory for girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills, and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Tolbert, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clark, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee, constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

State Confronts Watchman Holloway With Previous Affidavit

Solicitor Dorsey Fiercely Attacks Evidence Given by the Witness For Defense at Afternoon Session

He Also Implies That Watchman Was Trying to Fix Crime on Conley to Get Reward, Holloway Admits Signing Statement Produced by the Prosecutor—Other Witnesses for Defense Heard

After Solicitor Dorsey riddled E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil factory, with volleys of questions regarding former statements made by the witness and which he could explain or make coincide with his testimony Friday afternoon, court adjourned at 5:45 o'clock until 9 o'clock Saturday.

The solicitor also trapped the watchman and the witness for the defense. The solicitor also made the sensational implication that the bloody stick found by Pinkertons in the factory was planted by Holloway himself. The solicitor further implied that Holloway was working for a reward and had turned up Conley for that purpose.

After Holloway had declared that Daisy Hopkins' character was good as far as he knew, the solicitor asked him about a paper he had signed previously stating the contrary. He admitted that he signed the paper. The solicitor asked the witness if he hadn't told the detectives to return to the factory on a certain day and he was sure they would find something. The witness denied this.

Deputy sheriffs Friday afternoon searched Atlanta for George Epps, the little "newsie" who testified at the trial of Leo M. Frank that he rode to the city on the same car with Mary Phagan on the day she met her death in the National Pencil factory. The "newsie" was called Friday morning, but was not in court and deputies were sent out for him then.

When the afternoon session began Attorney Arnold again called for Epps, but he did not answer and Deputy Sheriff Plennie Minor told the court that search for him at his home in Bellwood Friday had been futile, but that his family had promised to send him to court as soon as he came in.

An attachment was then issued for the "newsie" and officers are looking for him where he is accustomed to sell his "wuxtras." The defense offered testimony by two street railway employes who manned the car upon which Mary Phagan rode into the city from Lindsay street on April 26, during the morning session, to refute the Epps boy's testimony that he was on the car, and it is expected that the little fellow will receive a severe grilling when he again takes the stand at the trial.

When court reconvened at 2 o'clock, Attorney Arnold called for George Epps. He was not in court and could not be located around the court house. Attorney Arnold announced the court.

"If your honor, we would like to have him here," said he.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Minor explained that an officer had been sent to his home in Bellwood Friday morning and that he couldn't be found there, but that members of his family had promised to send him to court as soon as he returned. An attachment was issued for the newsboy and a deputy sheriff went out to search for him.

J. Hinchey, resident at the Peachtree manager of the South Atlanta Lumber company, was called. Attorney Arnold explained that he called Mr. Hinchey out of the order he introduced because Mr. Hinchey wanted to leave the city.

"Do you know Leo M. Frank, the defendant," Attorney Arnold asked.

"I do."

"Did you see him on Memorial day, April 25?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"Opposite the main entrance of the state capitol on Washington street."

"What was Frank?"

"He was on a street car. I can't say positively whether or not it was a Washington street trolley, though."

"Do you recollect who was with him?"

"No."

"At what time was it when you saw him?"

"It was between 2 and 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon."

"How do you know?"

"Well, I left home between 1 and 1:30 o'clock with my wife and mother." The witness described the course they took through town, coming up the south capitol, and he was passing along the Washington street side of the capitol with them to get a car when they could see the Memorial day parade.

"How did you happen to see Frank?"

"I was driving my car along the street, and he stuck his car passed me, and I looked up and saw Frank in the car."

"Have you gone through these matters since to time yourself?"

"Sure." Mr. Hinchey gave the time it had required on three different occasions, each time arriving at the capitol between 2 and 2:11 o'clock.

"How did you happen to remember seeing Frank?"

"When I read the papers next day the matter was impressed on my memory."

Attorney Hooper cross-examined the witness.

"How many times did you say you saw Frank that day?"

"Only once, in the street car in front of the capitol."

"Did you say the crowds were congested around, and you were busy guiding your car among the people and the traffic?"

"Yes, sir."

"You had about all you could say grace over in managing that steering wheel, didn't you?"

"I claim to be an expert driver."

"Was there anything special about Frank to attract your attention on that occasion?"

HOW HE REMEMBERED.

"Nothing except I had had in my mind some work which I expected to talk over with him at the factory, and when I saw him I recalled that."

"You recall really any other persons you saw or recognized there?"

"No, sir."

"Nobody else attracted your attention?"

"No, sir."

"How many people do you know on that side of town?"

"I know a good many. I know people all over town."

"Nobody else in that crowd attracted your attention?"

"No, sir."

"How many times have you been to the jail to visit Frank?"

"Only once."

"Did you discuss this matter with him at that time?"

"Not in detail. I expressed my sympathy and—"

"What I mean is, you mentioned to him that you saw him that day?"

"No, yes."

"You were just telling him that you saw him. You didn't know whether it would be worth anything to him or not?"

"No, sir."

"That's why you went to the jail, wasn't it?"

"No, sir."

"Was it before or after the coroner's inquest that you called on Frank?"

NO QUESTION ABOUT IT.

"A long time after the inquest."

"You had heard that there was some question as to where he was at that hour, hadn't you?"

"There was no question in my mind, for I saw him."

Attorney Arnold pointed to the spot designated as a door leading into the part of the first floor that once was used by the Clark Woodenware company.

"Has this door been kept locked, Mr. Darley?"

"It's kept it locked after the Clark Woodenware company moved out, about the first of the year, until after the murder. One day I discovered that it was broken open."

DOOR BROKEN AFTER MURDER.

"How long after the murder was it you discovered this door open, Mr. Darley?"

"I don't remember. I know that I had it nailed up though, when I found it open, and it's been nailed up ever since."

In answer to other questions, Darley said that the trap door over the stairway at the rear of the basement, and the trap door over the chute, were neither locked nor nailed down so far as he knew.

Sitting at Frank's desk in the inner office, what view does one have of the second floor?

"Well, he can see as far back as the middle of the first clock. I sat there and could see just about one-half of its face."

"Suppose the safe door is open in the outer office, how much one have to stand to see the interior of Frank's office?"

"Almost in the door."

"Could one standing further away see over the door?"

"I can see over it by standing on my tiptoes."

"Have you ever seen Monteen Stover?"

"I saw her down here one day."

"Would you say that she could see over the door?"

"I don't think she could."

Attorney Arnold asked the witness to explain the route that one would have to take from Frank's inner office to the metal room.

Using a ruler, Darley traced on the model the route one would have to take.

DOUBLE DOOR UNLOCKED.

"This double door between the metal department and the main part of the factory—was it kept locked or unlocked?"

"Unlocked. There was no way of locking them."

"Is there any way, if two people went on the inside, to lock the doors from the inside?"

"Nope."

"State whether there is a cot, lounge, sofa or bed, or anything of that character, in the factory building."

"When the detectives came. I went with them into the woodenware company's part of the basement, and I saw three old boxes covered over with some bags."

"That was as foul and filthy a thing as a human being ever rested upon was it not?"

Solicitor Dorsey objected. It was a leading question, he said he. Attorney Arnold amended his question.

"The conditions there were boggy and dirty," answered the witness.

"Dirtier than a barnyard, wasn't it?"

"It was very dirty."

"What sort of boxes were they?"

"Some cracker boxes."

"What kind of sacks?"

"Crocus and corn sacks."

NO OTHER LOUNGE.

"And you say it was filthy?"

"Yes, sir, it was very nasty and dirty."

"Outside of these boxes and bags, there were no lounge, cot, bed or sofa anywhere in that factory building?"

"No, sir."

"Was there anything of that kind in the metal room?"

"No, sir."

"Was there any chair in the metal room?"

"I never saw one there."

"Anything except the machinery and stock?"

"No, sir."

"In the ladies' closet or dressing room, was there any bed?"

"No, sir, just a small cloak closet."

"You saw the place where Conley says he found the body?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you talk it over with the party interested or implicated?"

"Yes, but that was not a murder case."

"Did you discuss with Frank what your testimony was going to be?"

"No, sir, I told him I'd saw him on the car, and asked him if he saw me. He said he had not."

The witness's model of the basement, ground floor and second floor of the National Pencil factory was brought into court when Mr. Hinsey was excused. The model measures six and one-fourth feet long, by T. Willett, a pattern maker of 100 Highland avenue, who constructed the model, took the stand.

He made the model faithfully after a blue print furnished to him, he said. The scale of blue print was one-eighth inch to a foot, and he made the model three-eighths to the foot. He admitted that he had made none of the measurements himself. The direct examination was brief.

Attorney Hooper directed the cross-examination.

Attorney Hooper developed that the witness had not put the two windows on the office floor himself; that he had not pretended to get the height, merely making what was termed a ground plan model. The witness further admitted that several holes representing doors, trap-doors, etc., were not in proportion.

The witness was asked in such a low voice that the court repeatedly asked him to speak louder. While admitting these mistakes, he declared that generally, he had done everything in his power to follow faithfully the dimensions given on the blue print.

Several times Attorney Arnold objected to Mr. Hooper's questions. Mr. Arnold did not rise to object, and at each objection Mr. Hooper reached over and patted him on the head, telling him playfully to keep quiet.

The witness was excused, and N. V. Darley, general foreman of the National Pencil factory, was recalled to the witness stand, this time as a witness for the defense.

Questioned by Attorney Arnold, Mr. Darley said that he is general manager of the Forsyth street factory of the National Pencil company.

"You've seen this model, haven't you?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you see it in my office once?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"No, I didn't see it there."

"You are familiar with the ground plans of the different floors of the factory, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Come down from the chair and look at this model and tell me if it is a good representation of the basement and first and second floors of the factory?"

GOOD MODEL, SAYS DARLEY.

The witness examined it, and answered that it was such.

As Attorney Arnold indicated various objects in the model, Darley described them. Attorney Arnold questioned him particularly about the chute at the rear of the building.

"How big is that chute, Mr. Darley? Is it big enough for a body to go through?"

"Yes."

Darley then pointed out the spot where Mary Phagan's body was found. Several of the jurors stood up and looked closely when he indicated that minute or two before Mr. Holloway between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, is that true or not true?"

"It is true."

Attorney Hooper objected to the manner of Mr. Arnold's questioning the witness, declaring that he was endeavoring to have this witness pass upon the credibility of another witness and that the supreme court has ruled that this is incompetent.

LEFT WITH FRANK.

"I will frame my questions differently," said Mr. Arnold. "With whom did you leave the factory?" addressing the witness.

"With Mr. Frank."

"Which way did you go?"

"I went to a moving picture show on Peachtree street and he went toward Monta'g."

"Did you see the negro Jim Conley?"

"No, sir."

"Was that the last time you were at the factory that day?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever pinch or jolly Conley?"

"I kicked him once or twice when I caught him loafing, and he laughed at it. I wouldn't call it jollying."

"Did you ever see Frank jollying with him?"

"No."

"How long have you been working at the factory?"

"It was two years on April 7."

"I call your particular attention to a period beginning June, 1912. Did you ever know Daisy Hopkins?"

"I remembered her face when she was shown to me today."

"Did you ever see this man Dalton?"

"No."

"In that period, beginning June 1912, what was your custom as to being at the factory on Saturdays?"

"Usually I left at noon and in the two months that I have worked at the factory I have failed to come back in the afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock only a few occasions. My purpose was to find out about the financial sheet."

FRANK ABSENT ONCE.

"Do you remember ever failing to find Frank there?"

"Only once when he told me he would be away, and then I called to see it Schiff was there."

"Was Schiff usually there on Saturday afternoons, helping Frank?"

"With the exception of a very few instances."

"Were those instances while he was away on his vacation?"

"I don't know."

"What were the day watchman's instructions as to Saturday?"

"He was to stay there until the night watchman came on at 6 o'clock."

"Did you come in contact with the employes more or less than Frank?"

"Neither more nor less."

"Dalton testified that there was a negro night watchman there in September. Who was the night watchman then?"

"Either a Mr. Kendrick or his son—both white."

"When was this negro Lee hired?"

"Three weeks before the tragedy."

"Was there ever a negro nightwatchman at the factory prior to that time?"

"Not during my two years connection with the factory."

"Don't you know it wasn't bothered at all until the fire insurance people had made you clean up the basement?"

"I don't think it was touched until then."

"Who usually stayed there on Saturday afternoons beside Holloway?"

"Luther Pride does work that he can't do when the factory is in operation."

"Does the stenographer ever stay there on Saturday afternoons?"

"Occasionally."

"Are Saturday afternoons only devoted to work on the financial sheet?"

"Saturday afternoons are holidays."

"Who else stayed at the factory on Saturdays?"

"Every other Saturday a man oiled the machines on the fourth floor."

"Did you see Conley Monday after the tragedy? And how did he look?"

CONLEY EXCITED.

"Yes. He was very excited. I went to look at the body in the factory to see if there was anyone who looked suspicious, and Jim Conley was the man. I told the watchman to look out for him."

Solicitor Dorsey objected and was sustained. The question and answer were ruled out.

"At that time was it customary for the sweepers to work on Saturday afternoons?"

"No, they had instructions to quit at noon."

Mr. Arnold instructed the witness to point out on the model the position of the lavatory used by Frank.

Solicitor Dorsey cross-examined the witness.

"Mr. Darley, have you made any contribution to the defense fund of Frank?" questioned the solicitor.

"No, sir."

"Can you tell the character of Daisy Hopkins?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever see her?"

"I saw her down here this morning."

"You can't say, then, what her general reputation was around the pencil factory, can you?"

"No, sir, I cannot."

Solicitor Dorsey pointed to the door leading into that portion of the first floor formerly used by the Clark Woodenware Company.

"You say you found this door open, after the murder, Mr. Darley?"

"Yes, sir, you can't swingin open, though. The stick nailed across it was down."

"Was there anything else to hold it in place?"

"Nothing."

"That was after the crowds had gone through the factory on Sunday and Monday following the murder, wasn't it?"

"It must have been."

"Who nailed it up at your instruction?"

"I don't remember."

"Mr. Darley, don't you know that the door of these steps," pointing to the trap door over the chute from the first floor to the basement, "has been nailed down for months?"

"No, sir."

DORSEY TRIED STAIRS.

"Can you point out a more secure place to hide a body than at the bottom of the chute leading from the first floor to the basement?"

Attorney Arnold objected and was sustained.

Solicitor Dorsey amended the question. Darley replied that the bottom of the chute would have been a more secretive hiding place for a body than where Mary Phagan's body was found.

"Did you see the chute before the boxes were removed from around it?"

"I never noticed it."

Solicitor Dorsey continued: "The Sunday after the murder, Mr. Darley, how high were the boxes piled around the door leading into the woodenware room?"

"Nearly to the top."

"So far as you know, Mr. Darley, Frank could excuse the night watchman and put Conley to watch in his stead, couldn't he, on Saturday afternoons?"

"I wasn't there Saturday afternoons, and can't say as to that."

Solicitor Dorsey pointed to the room adjoining the metal room, where a vat is. "Isn't it very damp in this room, Mr. Darley? Isn't there water on the floor, and aren't there planks in there so you can walk around without wetting your feet?"

"Yes, sir."

The solicitor directed the witness' attention to the stairway leading from the third floor to the second floor at the back of the buildings.

"Isn't it your instructions to keep a bar across this door on pay days?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Darley, there's no reason for raking the paint from the paint room into the metal room or any other part of this floor, is there?"

"If it's done, it's done carelessly. There's no business reason for it."

"Do you undertake to say this model is at all accurate as to lines of vision?"

"So far as I can remember, it is."

FRANK'S DESK MOVED.

"You can't see the clock or the desk hasn't been moved since the murder, can you, Mr. Darley?"

"Not positively."

"How long is it since the clock has been fixed?"

"I don't remember it's being fixed since the murder?"

This concluded the cross-examination.

Mr. Arnold asked the witness if he had tried to see the time clock from Frank's desk. The witness said yes, he tried it Friday and could see about half the face of one of the clocks and couldn't see the other at all.

"Have the clocks been moved?" they ever know Daisy Hopkins?"

"Not that I know of."

"You would have known it if they had been moved?"

"Yes."

"Under whose orders would the clocks have been moved if they were moved?"

"Under my orders."

"Mr. Darley, in questioning you about the location of the paint room. Isn't it true that in no paint shop on earth can paint be confined to limits like these?"

"Yes, sir, as I said there is no business reason for paint to be outside the polishing room; but it is out and all over the place."

DIDN'T KNOW BLOOD.

"About that blood in front of the dressing room door, you didn't know what that was, did you?"

"No, sir."

"I believe you said when you were previously examined that you frequently found blood spots on the floor, especially around the ladies' dressing rooms and toilets?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you have more than 100 women working in this factory?"

"Yes."

"You don't know how long that spot had been there?"

"No, sir."

"And you wouldn't have noticed it unless your attention had been called to it?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Dorsey questioned you about water found in that part of the factory near the toilets. Was there any water where it was said that the girl's body was found?"

"No, sir."

"And no blood?"

"No, sir."

"And you looked carefully over this place both Monday and Tuesday?"

"Yes, sir."

"And found no blood or signs of blood?"

"No, sir."

"And the floor hasn't been washed since you've been with the factory, so that if the blood of a mouse had been there two years ago, it still would be there?"

Before the witness could answer, Solicitor Dorsey addressed the court.

DORSEY OBJECTS.

"Your honor, you should rule out that question. All this stuff about the blood of a mouse two years ago still being there, and washing the floor, and all like that, is wholly irrelevant."

The court sustained the objection.

"Well," said Attorney Arnold, "was there any water under the machine where Barrett said he discovered the hair?"

"No, sir."

"Had the floor been cleaned there since?"

"No, sir."

"Did you find any blood there?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever know Frank to make up a financial sheet except on Saturdays?"

"Only on Saturdays and holidays."

"Could you know where the cords were kept, didn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

"In fact, he knew the factory throughout as well as anybody in it?"

"Yes, sir."

"In reply to questions from Mr. Dorsey, you said boxes were piled in front of that door on the first floor on April 26."

"I don't know. As far as I could see, they shut off the view of the door."

TOLD POLICE OF BLOOD.

Solicitor Dorsey resumed the witness.

"It was you yourself who communicated with police headquarters and notified the officers when those blood spots were found, was it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Come down." said the solicitor. "Wait a minute!" shouted Mr. Arnold. "You were endeavoring to tell the police everything that you found and everything that was reported to you, were you not?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

"Come down."

"Hold on," demanded the solicitor. "When did you report Conley's nervousness to the police?"

"I think it was to Harry Scott, on Monday, April 28."

"Are you positive of that?"

"No, sir, I am not."

"You can't be positive?"

"No, sir."

The witness was excused.

EPPS BOY ABSENT YET.

"Call in that little boy Epps," said Mr. Arnold. The bailiffs called, but George didn't answer.

"Your honor, I want an attachment and a search warrant for this boy," said Mr. Arnold.

"I have already issued an attachment, and I will assist you in any way I can to get him here," said the judge.

The model of the factory was removed from court at this juncture, to make room for the feet of the lawyers.

Albert Kauffman was called back to identify the blue print from which the model was made. He said that the blue print was correct but not as complete as the plat introduced previously.

E. F. Holloway, day watchman and timekeeper at the pencil factory, was called to the stand again. He stands at the clock to see that everybody registers, he said. It was not his habit to indulge Conley by giving him time when he failed to punch the clock. He never asked the negro about failure to punch the clock, but docked his pay. He said that he *never saw Frank jolly*ing Conley.

He never saw Frank with the negro except one time when Conley was seeking to borrow a quarter from Frank. He volunteered the information that Frank was careful not to lend the negro more than was due him from the factory.

He said that during the past twelve months it has been a rule that no sweeper should work in the factory after noon on Saturdays. He said that Walter Pride sometimes worked there on Saturdays. He said there had been no negro night watchman until Newt Lee came to the factory three weeks before the tragedy.

RECESS TAKEN.

At this point proceedings were stopped for a brief recess.

When court resumed, Holloway was asked if he ever jollied with Conley, and said that he never jollied with him but that he kicked him around frequently when he caught him loafing.

"On Monday after the tragedy," asked Mr. Arnold, "did you notice the door leading back from the passageway on the first floor to the Clark Woodenware company's place; that also leads to that chute in the rear?"

The witness said that on Monday after the tragedy the door was open, although some time before that he had nailed it up.

"Do you period beginning June, 1912, up to the time of the tragedy, where were you on Saturday afternoons?"

"Every Saturday during that time, except two holidays, I stayed at the factory until 4 o'clock in the afternoon when I was relieved by Kendricks, and later by Newt Lee."

NO WOMEN THERE SATURDAYS.

"Did Frank ever have any women come up to see him on Saturday afternoons?"

"No one except his wife, who often came there to go home with him."

"Who helped Mr. Frank in the office?"

"Schiff, and sometimes there would be an office boy there."

"On any Saturday, this year or last year, did Jim Conley watch at the front door of the factory?"

"Not at any time before 4 o'clock?"

"Would you have been obliged to see him if he had been there?"

"I generally stayed in front to see that no one came into the factory who should not have been there."

"Do you recall any Saturday that Schiff went to or to the factory, except when he was away on his vacation?"

"No."

"Did you ever see anyone after office hours take any women into the building?"

"No."

"What time did you always come to the factory in the mornings on Saturday?"

"At 6:20 a. m."

"What time did you leave?"

"About 4 in the afternoon."

"You've had this man Dalton pointed out to you. Did you ever see him before or see him around the factory?"

"No."

NO COUPLES ALLOWED.

"Well, would you let a fellow like him come into the factory?"

"No, not unless he had mighty good business there."

"Did you ever know of any couples going in there?"

"No."

"What would you have done if you had?"

"I'd have put 'em out mighty quick."

"Do you know Daisy Hopkins?"

"I've seen her."

"Did she ever come back there after office hours?"

"Not while I was there."

"Did she ever go back there after she stopped working for the factory?"

"No."

"On Saturday, April 26, did you go upstairs and put on your coat and come downstairs about the same time Mr. Darley did?"

"I did not. Mr. Darley left about 9 o'clock."

"Have the street doors ever been locked while anybody worked in the factory?"

"They have not."

"Were you at the factory last Thanksgiving?"

"I was there until noon."

"It snowed that day, didn't it?"

"I don't know."

"Well, did you see a girl with white shoes and stockings, with all that snow on the ground, come into the pencil factory that morning?"

"No, sir."

Attorney Hooper objected to the question on the ground that there had been no evidence introduced that there was snow on the ground last Thanksgiving.

"Don't worry, Mr. Hooper. I will supply that evidence."

"On that occasion of last Thanksgiving, did Conley come into the factory and watch at the front door?"

"He did not."

"If he had been watching there, you would have been bound to see him, wouldn't you?"

"I would."

"How many times on Saturday did you usually see Frank there?"

"Every time. I went by the office."

"Did you ever see beer in his office?"

"I never saw it a single time."

STENOGRAPHER REMAINED.

"Did he ever keep stenographers there Saturday afternoons?"

"Sometimes."

"Did the shipping clerk ever stay there?"

"Sometimes, if there was shipping to be done."

"Did anybody else usually work in the factory on Saturday afternoons?" Attorney Arnold suggested the names of several employes.

Holloway said that they did.

"Did you ever see anybody else come in?" Attorney named several of Frank's business associates.

Holloway replied that frequently men on business calls there on Saturday afternoons.

"Did you ever turn your job over to Conley?"

"No, sir."

"When Mrs. Frank came, would you let her in?"

"I would, and send her up to Mr. Frank's office."

"Did Conley ever take your place when you were sick?"

"I never was sick enough to lay off."

"Do you know a man named Wilson who works in the factory?"

"Yes."

WORKS SATURDAYS.

"Doesn't he work Saturday afternoons, oiling up the motor and fixing the machinery around there?"

"Sir?"

Attorney Arnold asked the witness if several people whom he named did not work in the factory on Saturday afternoons. The witness replied affirmatively.

*"Could these men go all over the fac*tory?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever see the doors of the outer or the inner office of Frank locked?"

"I never did."

"Is there glass in the doors?"

"Yes."

"There are two windows in Frank's office, aren't there?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see the shades of these pulled down?"

"Never except sometimes in the mornings they would be pulled down a little to keep the sun out."

"Isn't it a fact that salesmen often visit the factory on Saturday afternoons?"

"There were nearly always some there."

"Did you ever know Frank to refuse to see them?"

"Never."

DARK AT ELEVATOR.

"How far is it from the front door to the elevator shaft?"

"Ten or twelve feet."

"It's dark around there, isn't it?"

"Yes, we have to keep a gas jet burning."

"If a girl came down the steps, and if a man was lurking there in the dark, couldn't he attack her?"

"Very easily."

"Did members of the Montag family sometimes visit Frank on Saturday afternoons?"

"Nearly always on Saturdays."

"Did you see a negro drayman named McCrary go upstairs Saturday morning, April 26?"

"I did."

"When did he go up?"

"I can't say."

"Do you recollect when he came down?"

"I do not."

CONLEY NOT THERE.

"Did you see Conley on the morning of April 26?"

"No, sir. I did not. He was not there."

"If he had been in that front hall, you would have been obliged to see him, wouldn't you, Mr. Holloway?"

"I would."

"Did you observe anything out of the ordinary about Jim Conley on the next week after the murder?"

"I did."

"What was it?"

"Well, on Monday morning he was around washing the windows on the first and second floor instead of working on the third floor."

"What led to his arrest?"

"Well, I caught him washing his shirt, and called them up and told them to come and get him. The day before that he carried out a pair of overalls, and said he was going to Block's candy factory to take them to another pair there. He came back before he would have had time to get there. And the overalls were washed and dried."

"Could he write?"

"I don't know."

MEASURED TIME FRIDAY.

"Did you walk down the car track from Broad and Hunter streets to the pencil factory and up to Frank's office."

"I did."

"When?"

"Today."

"How long did it take you to make the distance?"

"About two and three-fourths minutes."

"Well, anybody that left a street car at Broad and Hunter streets at 12:10 o'clock wouldn't get to the pencil factory until about 12:12 1-2 or 3-4, would they?"

"No, sir."

"Did you test the time it took to walk from the corner of Marietta and Forsyth streets to the pencil factory?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long did it take?"

"Six minutes."

DORSEY EXAMINES WITNESS.

"You may cross-examine him now, Colonel Dorsey," said Mr. Arnold. The solicitor went after the witness with a vengeance.

"Have you had any conversation with Kendricks, the former night watchman, about this case, in which you asked him whether Leo M. Frank had ever called him up after he left the factory?"

"No, sir." the witness could answer Mr. Rosser objected, declaring that the question was immaterial.

"We'll see whether it's immaterial," declared Solicitor Dorsey. "Mr. Holloway, didn't you try to get Kendricks to swear that Frank had called him up after he had left the factory?"

"I did not," retorted the witness, manifesting some excitement.

"Didn't you tell Kendricks to go ahead and swear to that, for it would make no difference as nobody except he and you ever would know about it?"

"No, I never!" snapped the witness.

"The day before this alleged bloody club was found, didn't you tell Whitfield to come back next day; that he would be sure to find something?"

"I did not." The witness answered with emphasis, viciously.

"Do you know Daisy Hopkins' reputation?"

"It's all right as far as I know."

ADMITS AFFIDAVIT.

"All right as far as you know." Didn't you sign this paper that I hold in my hand, and didn't you tell me that she was anything but all right, and that you couldn't depend on anything she said?"

"No, sir!"

The solicitor exhibited the paper to him.

"Did you sign this paper?"

The witness replied, "Yes, sir."

"And you read it before you signed it, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, do you deny that you told me, as I sat often down here over your own signature that you couldn't depend on anything he said?"

"I deny it, but I think I said that we couldn't depend on what she said at the factory."

"Didn't you say you read this paper before you signed it?"

"I suppose I did. Is that yours or Starnes?"

"Not then Starnes had one, too!" interjected Mr. Rosser, of the defense.

"Yes, sir," said the witness.

"At the time did you say that Darley left the factory that Saturday morning?"

"9:30."

CHANGES TESTIMONY.

"Look-a-here, Mr. Holloway, didn't you tell me positively—and I asked you to be positive, that Darley and Frank were not together, that Frank was saying something about going to a ball game if the weather permitted—didn't you tell me that it was about 10:45 when at the time the murder was committed?"

"The work was divided equally between us."

"Did you have anything to do with the books and the financial statement?"

"Yes."

"How long have you been there?"

"About five years."

"Were you there when Frank came?"

"No, he came first."

"In what capacity did you first work?"

"I assisted in all-round office work."

"At the time of the tragedy, what position were you in?"

"On the first Sunday in January previous to the tragedy I went on the road a short time before the tragedy they needed somebody in the office, and I offered my services."

"Then up to the first Saturday in January what did you work?"

"In the office with Frank."

"You helped Frank get up the financial statements?"

"Yes."

"Where did you get your mail?"

"At Montag's."

"What amount of cash did you and Frank handle?"

"We handled the petty cash, ranging from $25 to $50."

"Where did you keep it?"

"In the cash box in a drawer of the desk."

"Where did you get the cash for the payroll?"

"We got it on checks signed by Sig Montag."

"Who went to the bank?"

"I did."

"You paid in envelopes?"

"Yes."

"Did you draw more or less than the payroll?"

"We drew the exact amount to a penny."

"For what items did you spend small amounts out of the petty cash fund?"

"Items such as drayage, kerosene oil for the night watchman, candles, and anybody."

"What time were you and Frank paid off?"

"We drew our checks together about the last of the month."

"About what time did you draw your checks?"

"I don't know when he drew his, but I usually drew mine on the last day of the month, although it sometimes went over a few days."

"FRANK'S SALARY.

"Do you know what Frank's salary was?"

"I do. It was $150 a month."

"What was your salary?"

"Eighty dollars a month."

"You said Sig Montag was the general manager?"

"Yes."

"Where did he stay?"

"He stayed at Montag Brothers."

"Who banked the money and paid the bills?"

"That was all done from Montag's?"

"Did you or Frank draw any checks in payment of bills?"

"We did not. Neither of us had the authority to draw checks."

"What, then, in a general way, were your duties?"

"We attended to the manufacturing end of the business."

"What did this finance sheet show?"

"It showed whether the week terminated with a profit or a loss. It showed the quantity of pencils manufactured and the quantity packed, and other similar details of the business."

"What time did the week start?"

"It started on Friday morning, and ran until the following Thursday night."

FINANCIAL SHEET.

"What else did you have to show on this financial sheet?"

"We had to show prices, shipping, and amounts."

"You say that the week started Friday morning and went to Thursday night. Why was it that you waited until Saturday to make up the financial sheet?"

"Because reports supposed to reach there Friday often did not come until Saturday and because we had to include the payroll, which was finished on Saturday."

"How long has it been customary to make this financial sheet on Saturdays?"

"Ever since the factory started."

"How did you help Frank on it?"

"I usually got up most of the data, the factory records, and reports of the foremen and foreladies, record of shipments, and data from the slat factory and totals of payrolls."

"Beginning June, 1912, and up to January 1, 1913, what Saturdays did you miss going to the factory?"

"None at all."

"How about your vacation?"

"Oh, yes, I was off the last week in July and the first week in August."

"Except for those two weeks, did you miss a single Saturday in that period?"

"No."

FRANK'S OFFICE HOURS.

"What time would you come back on Saturday afternoons?"

"Well, I usually left at 12:30 and came back at 2 to 2:15."

"How about Frank?"

"He usually left a little after 1 o'clock and returned about 3 o'clock."

"Do you remember Frank ever getting back first?"

"No."

"Would you work until he came?"

"Yes."

"And after you got there, how did you do?"

"We worked together."

"Were you interrupted frequently by salesmen?"

"Yes, people often came on business, and sometimes people from Montag's would come."

"Did you ever know of the door being locked on Saturday afternoons?"

"No."

OTHERS IN OFFICE.

"Who else was there?"

"The office boy generally was in the outer office."

"Did you ever have stenographers come back on Saturday?"

"No."

"Who else was there?"

"As a rule, one of the machinists stayed there, and Harry Denham would work on the fourth floor, and a negro named Leo Brindle would work there, and sometimes Mr. Wilson."

"How about Holloway?"

"He usually stayed around the time clock until relieved by the night watchman, or about 4:30."

"Did you ever have a negro night watchman?"

"Not until Newt Lee came."

"Who was the watchman before him?"

"The Kendricks."

"How long did it take to get up the financial sheet?"

"It depended on the number of interruptions."

"What time did you usually leave the factory on Saturdays?"

"About 5:30 o'clock."

"By yourself?"

"No, with Frank."

MRS. FRANK VISITED OFFICE.

"Did Mrs. Frank ever come to the factory on Saturday afternoons?"

"Quite often."

"Did you ever see Jim Conley on Saturday afternoons?"

"No."

"Did you and Frank ever have any women up there?"

"No."

"Is there a bed, a cot, a lounge, or a sofa, or anything else like that, in the building?"

"No, my attention has been called to a filthy box in the basement which has no connection with our factory, since this matter came up."

Mr. Arnold caused the witness to repeat that he had missed no Saturdays except on his vacation.

"Were you there the first Saturday in January?"

"Yes, I left the city about 5:10."

"Were you there at the factory most of the day?"

"Yes."

"Who else was there?"

"Ten or twelve of the fellows. We stayed there until 5 minutes to train time, and several of them and Mr. Frank went to the train with me."

"Did you ever know this man Dalton?"

"Never saw him."

KNOWS HOPKINS GIRL.

"Do you know Daisy Hopkins?"

"Yes."

"Where did she work?"

"On the office floor with about ten other girls."

"Do you remember when she left?"

"No."

Mr. Arnold handed to the witness the factory pay roll and asked him to refresh his memory from it as to the time and left. The witness looked through the pay roll and remarked: "This books begins on May 1, 1912."

"When does Daisy Hopkins' name appear last?"

"On the week of June 6, 1912."

"What day of the week was that?"

"She only worked two days, Friday and Saturday."

"Do you know this womag personally?"

"I'd know her if I saw her."

"Did you ever see her come back on any Saturday afternoon after she quit the factory, alone or with anybody else?"

"I did not."

"How long did Frank remain in the pencil factory on the first Saturday in January?"

"Till he went to the train with me in the evening."

SNOWED THANKSGIVING?

"Do you recollect last Thanksgiving day?"

"I do."

"What kind of a day was it?"

"It was cold and snowing."

"Were you at the pencil factory that day?"

"I was."

"Who else was there?"

"Mr. Frank was there, and the office boy, and I had Jim Conley come back."

"Tell the jury the conditions under which Conley came back."

"The box room had to be cleaned up," said the witness, facing the jury, "and I told him to come back and do it. I put him and the office boy at work together."

"Where were you and Frank at this time?"

"We were in the office."

"When did Frank leave?"

"About 12; we went together."

"When did Conley leave, to the best of your recollection?"

"About 10 o'clock in the morning."

"Do you remember anything that Frank had to do that day?"

"Yes, he went to a B'nai B'rith fair."

"He was president of that organization, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"Where was the fair?"

"At the old Auditorium."

"You helped to carry some bundles to the car for him, didn't you?"

"Yes, at noon."

SCHIFF PAID OFF APRIL 25.

"What time did he get on the car, to the best of your memory?"

"About 12:10 p. m."

"Who paid off on Friday, April 25?"

"I did."

"Where did you pay from?"

"The window in the outer office."

"Do you recall Helen Ferguson getting her pay?"

"I do."

"Do you remember her or anybody else asking to get Mary Phagan's pay envelope?"

"I do not."

"Whom would she have had to ask, in order to get it?"

"Me. She would have had to bring a note."

"What is the rule regarding relatives getting pay for anybody?"

"Well, if we know their faces we might give it to them."

NONE ASKED FOR MARY'S PAY.

"Did you see anybody go to Mr. Frank and ask for Mary Phagan's pay?"

"I did not."

"Was there any reason for going to him?"

"No, sir."

"How many people did you pay off Friday?"

"Well, we had 160 envelopes when I started, and I think there were about six or eight left."

"Now, that Friday night, when did you and Frank leave?"

"We left together, about 6 or 6:30 o'clock."

In answer to questions the witness said that he did not get up his usual data on that Friday because he had to fix up the pay roll that day. "This threw more work on Frank," said the witness, "because he had to do on Saturday the work I usually did on Friday, before he could start on the financial sheet."

WHY HE WASN'T THERE APRIL 26.

"Did you intend to come to the factory that Saturday morning?"

"I did."

"Did you come?"

"I did not."

"Why?"

"I overslept."

"It was a holiday anyhow, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"Did Frank or anybody else call you up at your home and ask for you?"

"Yes, they called me up, but the maid answered the phone."

Attorney Arnold directed the witness' attention to the diagram of the pencil factory introduced by the solicitor. Mr. Arnold asked Schiff if the diagram showed Frank's office or the outer office to be larger. The witness replied that it showed the outer office the larger.

"As a matter of fact, which of these two offices is the larger."

"Frank's office—it's about twice as large."

"Is the elevator as far from the office as this diagram shows?"

"The elevator is directly opposite the time clock. This diagram shows that it's nearly as far back as the staircase."

"Then that's an inaccuracy?"

"It is."

MODEL OF FACTORY.

The model of the factory was brought into court.

"Are you familiar with this door into the Clark Woodenware department?"

"Yes."

"Did you notice this door after the tragedy?"

"Yes, I noticed it two or three days afterward."

"Was it open or shut?"

"It was cracked."

"Is there a hole there in the woodenware department?"

"Yes. It is a sort of a built-up hole in the floor, where a machine was operated formerly."

"Is it open?"

"Yes."

"It has no lid?"

"None at all."

"Is the opening down through that whole big enough to put through the body of a girl the size of Mary Phagan?"

"Yes."

"Do you recollect that hole ever being nailed up?"

"I do not."

"If a body was pushed down through that hole, where would it stop?"

"I should say it would stop on the platform below."

THE CHUTE.

"This first chute here, shown in the model, does it stay open?"

"There was no danger of anybody falling through it. It was protected by a square banister about waist high."

The model was then removed from court. Attorney Arnold began to question the witness in detail concerning the finance sheet which Frank claims to have made out on Saturday afternoon, April 26.

"Look at this paper. Do you recognize it?"

"I do."

"What does it show?"

"It shows the name, the grade, and the amount of pencils packed in our factory during the week ending April 24."

"When did Frank first know that you hadn't gotten up for him that data?"

"On Saturday morning, I suppose."

"How long did it usually take you and Frank to finish the financial sheet?"

"About three or four hours."

"Is that the sheet Frank made upon Saturday morning, April 26?"

"It is the sheet for that week."

SHEET FOR APRIL 26 ACCURATE.

"Have you been into those figures to see if he carried into the sheet the data you left there for him?"

"I have."

"Are the figures accurate?"

"They are."

Attorney Arnold asked the witness to explain a number of the items at the top of the finance sheet. The witness explained that it first items represented fixed charges, such as rent, light and power, insurance, etc.

"Please tell us what that next item is."

"It shows 2,756 and a half gross."

"What is that?"

"That is the number of gross of pencils manufactured that week."

"Are his figures correct according to the data compiled by you?"

"They are."

"What does Mr. Frank have to do to get that item?"

"He had to go over about thirty sets of figures."

"How many different kinds of pencils do you find classified on that finance sheet?"

The witness glanced down the sheet and replied that he found thirty-five different kinds.

"How long would it require to make out that finance sheet containing that many classifications?"

"I never timed it exactly."

VERY TEDIOUS TASK.

"What is the character of the work to be done in order to arrive at the figures shown on the finance sheet?"

"Addition, multiplication and subtraction."

Attorney Arnold then went into minute detail with the witness in an effort to show that making out the finance sheet was a very complicated and tedious task. He showed among other things that in addition to classifying each and every grade of pencils manufactured during the week, he must classify also each grade of rubber plugs for sale during the week, and each grade of tips used, and each grade of lead used, together with the amount of each.

Schiff said that he had never known of the financial sheet being completed in less than four hours and a half hours. Usually it took three hours or more, said he.

HANDWRITING NORMAL.

He identified the financial sheet made out on April 26 as being in Frank's usual and normal handwriting, and declared that he had checked all of the calculations and found them accurate. He compared the April 26 financial sheet of the week before, also in Frank's hand, and said that he found no difference in the writing. No nervousness was shown in the writing, said he.

Attorney Arnold produced the permanent record of the factory, showing all of the financial sheets, which are bound and kept in the safe of the factory. He commenced with the factory week ending May 2, 1912, and followed each sheet to the witness, who declared that they were all in Frank's handwriting.

From the week ending May 2 through the week ending January 2, 1913, with the exception of July 25 and August 1, the witness declared that all the sheets were made by Frank in his presence on Saturday afternoons in the factory. From January 2 through April 23, he declared, all the sheets were in Frank's handwriting, although he was not present when they were made.

The cash book was shown to the witness. In it were found records of petty cash and disbursements around the factory. There was a balance of cash on hand, in that account, of $36.64 on the Saturday of the murder, said the witness.

"Where was this cash kept?"

"In the little cash box."

"Was not Frank's money was it?"

"No, it belonged to the company."

TECHNICAL MATTERS.

The witness was asked a number of questions of a technical nature regarding the accounts in the cash book.

The requisition and house order book was produced before him, and numerous questions regarding it were asked and answered. He explained that from it the preliminary calculation had to be made before the financial sheet could be drawn. He identified eleven orders in the book, in Frank's handwriting, entered on Saturday, April 26. He testified that there were no errors in the entering of the orders, for the goods and reached their destination as far as he knew, no complaints having been received of their non-delivery. If they had not been filled properly, we would have heard from them some time before now, was the comment of the witness.

After finishing with the questions concerning the orders received on April 26 and duly entered by Frank, according to the witness, Attorney Arnold asked the witness where Frank got these orders. Frank got them at Montag's, said Schiff. To this reply Solicitor Dorsey objected, unless the witness could testify of his own personal knowledge. Attorney Arnold changed the question.

WENT TO MONTAG'S FOR MAIL.

"Was any of these orders in the office when you left there Friday afternoon?"

"No."

"Where did Frank go usually to get his mail?"

"He went to Montag's."

"You found these orders there in the office on Monday, duly entered?"

"I did."

"You shipped the goods called for in the orders?"

"Yes."

"You received no complaints from any o the firms to which you shipped the goods?"

"None whatever."

"Was the work Frank did in entering these orders outside and independent of the work he did on the finance sheet?"

"It was."

Attorney Arnold questioned the witness as to his movements on Sunday, April 27.

"Did you identify the body of Mary Phagan?"

"I did not."

"Did you know Mary Phagan?"

"I knew her by sight, but I won't be positive that I knew her by sight."

FRANK NOT SCRATCHED.

"Was there any scratch or bruise on Mr. Frank on Sunday?"

"There was not."

"When anything went wrong at the factory, how did it affect Mr. Frank?"

"It affected him very much. He is a man of very nervous temperament. When anything went wrong he would get excited and run back and forth and show his agitation in various way."

"Just what did Mr. Frank do to manifest his nervousness?"

"His hands would shake this way," illustrating.

"Was it unusual for Mr. Frank to get nervous?"

"No."

"Do you remember a child that had been run over by a car, and do you remember how Mr. Frank acted?"

"Yes, he came in very much excited. I had to give him some ammonia and he was not much good the rest of the day."

At this point Attorney Arnold asked the solicitor for the notes found beside the body of Mary Phagan.

WHAT HE KNOWS OF CONLEY.

"Do you know Jim Conley?"

"Yes."

"How long have you known him?"

"About two years."

"What sort of a negro is he?"

"He is very little use to him."

To this question and answer Attorney Hooper objected on the ground that it was a conclusion. Attorney Arnold changed the form of his question and proceeded as follows:

"What kind of work did Jim Conley do?"

"Among other things, he trucked goods around the factory and ran the elevator some."

"Do you know Jim Conley's general character for truth and veracity?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Bad."

"Would you, knowing his character, believe him on his oath?"

"I would not."

"Would you believe him on oath or off or oath?"

"No."

At this point Solicitor Dorsey turned over to Attorney Arnold the notes found by Mary Phagan's body. Mr. Arnold exhibited the notes to the witness and asked him this question:

"Were any of the factory can be found paper like this?"

"All over the plant."

"Why all over the plant?"

"We always give our expensive letterheads to the employes. When they call for paper to use as memoranda in their work, we furnish them these cheap writing tablets."

TABLETS ALL OVER FACTORY.

"Are the remainder of the writing tablets swept into the trash?"

"Yes."

At what places in the plant can these writing tablets be found?"

"From the roof to the cellar."

"Now look at this yellow paper."

"That is a duplicate order sheet of an order filled. This was not in use at the time of the tragedy."

"Where were they to be found?"

"Well, a foreman might have a number of them in his desk on the fourth floor, and there were some in the outer office. They were accessible to anybody."

Attorney Arnold then had overhead a telephone conversation between Frank and a Mr. Ersenbach on Friday, the day before the tragedy. That witness said that he remembered talking about a baseball game, but his recollection of the words of the conversation was hazy.

The witness admitted that a person sitting at Frank's desk could hear everything that went on in the outer office. He could see the steps going down to the first floor, and if the door of the safe in the outer office is open, said he, "one could see only the wall in the inner office, and could not see at all. He said that a person of Monteen Stover's height could see the door of the safe open.

DIDN'T SEE MARY'S PURSE.

During work hours the safe door usually stands open, he said. Becker left the office Friday, he said, and went through it, and did not see a mesh bag there. The only pocketbook he ever saw in the safe, he said, was a small leather purse, which was found by an employe on the sidewalk two years ago. Schiff said that he saw Jim Conley in the factory office on Tuesday.

On Tuesday morning while Frank was in the factory he was with him constantly, said Schiff, and did not see him speak to Conley. Everybody was excited Monday and Tuesday and one of the girls went into hysterics, he said, crying out that they shouldn't take him (referring to Mr. Frank).

CONLEY FEARED CROWD.

He remembered seeing Jim Conley in the shipping room. "What are you doing here?" the witness said he asked. Conley replied that he was afraid to go out and would give a million dollars if he was a white man.

Schiff said he told the negro that he had nothing to be afraid of and to go on down the steps. Schiff said it was very dark on the first floor of the factory, except at the elevator. He had never known Frank to shut or lock the office doors. There are glasses in those doors, he said.

Attorney Arnold asked him a number of questions relative to the elevator shaft. He said that the door of the shaft was always closed and that it would be a simple matter to throw any one down in it. The elevator machinery is noisy when it is first running, said he, and stops at the basement with a thud. He said that the humming of the motor box has not been locked, that he knows of, since the complaint was made by the insurance people before the factory.

The witness said he often got after Jim Conley for failing to punch the time clock, but that Conley did not indulge him and docked him each time.

Schiff said that he often had seen blood spots in different parts of the factory, especially on the floor by the ladies' cut, and it was a rule that they should come to the office to have their wounds dressed up. He said he saw the blood spots which Barrett found, and the hair. He said that he saw Jim Conley when Conley pointed out the place where he claimed to have found the body, and that there was no blood there. The place was dry, he said. He said he did not recall the metal room floor having been scrubbed in four years.

Solicitor Dorsey took up the cross-examination of the witness.

DENIES CONVERSATION.

"Did you talk to Undertaker Gheesling Sunday, April 27?"

"I did not. I was not there."

"When did you talk to him?"

"Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock."

"Well, you told Gheesling something about Mary Phagan, didn't you?"

"I did not."

"Where did you get that information?"

"I said I didn't tell him that."

Attorney Arnold entered an objection to the whole subject. Judge Roan said: "Mr. Dorsey, he denies he ever said it. I rule it all out."

"Well, you know about Mrs. White claiming to have seen a negro at the bottom of the stairs when she left the factory, Saturday, didn't you?"

"I did."

And Sam Hewlitt a private detective, that he had seen a negro before you hired the Pinkertons, wasn't he, and you didn't tell him anything about that, did you?"

"He was there, but we hired him as night watchman."

"When did you hire him?"

"On the Sunday afternoon after the murder."

"When did you first tell the city detectives about this?"

Attorney Arnold objected. He said that Detective Scott already had sworn that he told the city detectives about it.

ROAN SUSTAINS OBJECTION.

"Your honor, I want to show that the factory people never told the police of this fact," said the solicitor. Judge Roan sustained the objection, however.

"On Monday, how many times did Frank telephone to you to get the Pinkertons?"

"Three or four times, I think."

"Where was he?"

"At home."

"Wasn't the factory full of detectives when he telephoned—city detectives?"

"I don't know. I think so, though. I think the first time they came Monday was when we telephoned about finding the blood."

"When was the first time Frank telephoned you about getting the Pinkertons?"

"About 12 o'clock, I think."

"What did he tell you?"

"He told me to see Mr. Montag and tell him that he thought we ought to hire the Pinkertons to find the murderer, in justice to our employes."

"When did he phone again?"

"About 1:30 o'clock, I guess."

"What did he say that time?"

"Well, he asked me if I had seen Mr. Montag yet, and I told him that I hadn't."

FRANK 'PHONED OFTEN.

"How long was it before he telephoned again?"

"It was just a little after 1, then."

"You said Frank talked a great deal, and tried to explain his nervousness, on the morning the body was found, didn't you?"

"I didn't say 'talked a great deal.'"

"Didn't you say he tried to explain it?"

"Yes, I said that."

Solicitor Dorsey picked up a signed statement made previously by Schiff and asked, "Didn't you state in this that Frank referred to his nervousness and tried to account for it?"

"I didn't say who brought the subject up, though."

"But you did Frank say on occasions when he referred to this fact?"

DOESN'T REMEMBER.

"I don't remember exactly. I think one time, though, he spoke of how awful the girl looked at the undertaker's, and told that they had taken him into a room where the body was and had flashed on a light suddenly."

"What did Frank say the detectives told him when they called him over the phone on the morning the body was found?"

"I don't remember."

"Was your memory better on May 13 than now?"

"On May 12? I guess it was."

"Didn't Frank tell you that he asked the detectives if there was a fire at the factory?"

"Yes, he said he asked if there was anything wrong there."

"What did Frank say about his breakfast?"

"He said it was one reason why he was nervous—he hadn't had any."

"You've been without a stenographer for quite a while, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"As a result of this, what was the condition of the work?"

"The work has accumulated to some extent."

"Do you do any billing?"

"No."

"Who does?"

"The stenographer. Mr. Frank has made out bills from the checking sheet."

FRANK'S SATURDAY WORK.

"Frank doesn't do any typewriting, does he?"

"No, sir."

"What work was there for Frank to do on Saturday except with reference to the finance sheet?"

"Enter the orders and make requisitions."

"You know that Miss Hall entered the orders, don't you?"

"I do not."

"When was the first time you saw these orders which are in this book?"

"Monday or Tuesday."

"Didn't you say before the coroner that you saw them on May 2?"

"I said that it was May 2 when I first entered something myself."

"How long would it take to enter those orders on that book?"

"About an hour or an hour and a quarter."

"And to make the acknowledgments at the same time?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you say before the coroner that it would only take half an hour?"

CROWD LAUGHS.

Attorney Rosser objected. Solicitor Dorsey declared: "He (the witness) knows what I want." There was an audible laughter in court. Attorney Arnold jumped to his feet. "Your honor, I am going to move to clear the court if this isn't stopped. I don't know who is instigating this, but these people are not participating in this trial, and they should be made to preserve order."

Judge Roan commanded the sheriff to bring any person before him whom he caught laughing or creating any kind of disorder.

"Didn't the coroner ask you how long it took to enter those orders, and didn't you say 'not over a half an hour'? Tell this jury why you now say an hour and a half."

"I said it took a half an hour simply to enter the orders."

"You know that Miss Hall made the acknowledgments, don't you?"

"No, I do not."

"You know that Miss Hall did it if she was there, don't you?"

"I do not."

"If Frank did make the acknowledgments, how long would it take him to do so?"

"Not over five or ten minutes."

"Well, why should it take him an hour and a half to enter eleven orders on this book?"

"Because he had to enter them, transcribe them and copy them?"

"Yes, to transcribe them and copy them."

DORSEY GETS IN EVIDENCE.

Mr. Rosser objected again to the questions. Solicitor Dorsey put a new question.

"Now tell the jury what you stated it took Frank an hour and a half to do."

Mr. Arnold objected to this question.

"All right," said the solicitor. "Mr. Witness, come down here in front of the jury box and take this book and put your finger on the beginning of this hour and a half of work, and explain just what Frank did during that period."

The witness went through the book, pointing out the work which he said Frank did on that Saturday.

"Was any of that work done on Friday?"

"No."

"How do you know?"

"Because none of it was there when I left Friday night."

The solicitor, pointing to the orders, demanded "How long with this data before him could it take Frank to enter those eleven orders?"

"Half an hour."

"You think it would take an expert penman like Frank 30 minutes to write down eleven short orders?"

"I didn't say he was an expert."

"You've made out all the financial statements, doesn't he? And none has been made out since he's been in jail?"

"Yes, he makes out the statements. None have been made out since he's been in jail."

SHAKES FINGER IN FACE.

Attorney Arnold suggested that the witness should take the chair; that the solicitor and the witness were "lowering" at each other and had their fingers in each other's faces and they might fight. Solicitor Dorsey ignored the interruption, the witness remaining in front of the jury box.

"You tell me that you never watched Frank enter orders."

"I said I'd never timed him."

"When, in a way, were guess as to how long it would take him?"

"Yes."

"Then it may have taken thirty minutes, or it may not have taken him but fifteen minutes?"

"Yes."

"What else was there to do beside enter these orders?"

"Transcribe them and acknowledge them."

"Didn't Miss Hall do that?"

"She only acknowledged them."

COUNSEL ARGUES.

There was some argument between the solicitor and Mr. Arnold as to the next question he asked the witness. The solicitor stated that he desired to show by the witness that Miss Hall did this work Saturday morning, April 26; that she had put Frank down on it to show that she had done it, and that it went on out to Mr. Schiff. The solicitor declared that he ought not to be required to indicate to the witness first what he purposed showing.

"What is the regular way about acknowledging these orders?"

"There is no regular way. Sometimes the orders are acknowledged before they are filled."

"When, in the usual orderly way, did Frank first enter the orders on this book?"

"There was no certain first step in the process."

"Then you had no system at all?"

"Yes, and this satisfactory to me," said Jacksonian, and transferred by the said W. McDaniel to Mrs. Mary Miller, recorded in book 2, page 237, Miller for valuable consideration, and sold for the benefit of said L. F. Buks, transferee. A deed for the said Ella Dillard. A Crumb of Bread Better Than None.

There is a morsel of comfort in the compulsory school attendance bill which the Senate passed Friday. It betokens a faint stirring of the Legislative conscience to this great social educational issue. Shadowy and insufficient as it is, this bill may be the pathfinder to some adequate measure in the seasons to come.

A fairly effective bill had been tabled earlier in the day. The supporters of compulsory school attendance then acted upon the theory that a crumb of bread is better than none at all; and so a substitute bill was introduced and passed, though strangely enough eleven votes were cast against it.

Georgia is one of the only six States in the Union that has no compulsory school attendance law whatsoever. That is not only a blot upon the State's good name, it is a menace to the State's civic and social welfare.

County Fairs.

In commenting on the impressive list of county fairs which are to be held in Kentucky this year, the Louisville Courier-Journal pays a merited tribute to the value of this very old but now renascent institution. The typical county fair of today, it truly says, is first of all educational in purpose and is no longer to be regarded "merely as a medium of amusement." Indeed, the clamorous fakirs and gaudy sideshows that monopolized the interest of fairs held some years ago are now becoming conspicuous by their absence or, at the most, are occupying a secondary place on the grounds, a fact which is distinctly advantageous to the larger and more wholesome purposes of the fair. The Courier-Journal remarks in this connection:

"The county fair should be an exposition of county resources and a mirror of agricultural progress and domestic endeavor. By way of variety amusement features are necessary but they should not be in such number as to overbalance or overshadow the serious business of the fair. . . . The real county fair, agricultural, industrial and mechanical, should never languish for lack of interest. Primarily the average fair is for the benefit of the farmer and this is right and proper, for practically every county is an agricultural county and the farm is the foundation of general prosperity."

It is a noteworthy and highly gratifying fact that county fairs have been greatly on the increase in Georgia during the past few years. Their distinctive character varies with the locality. In some districts corn exhibits are stressed, and everywhere such exhibits are encouraged. In others, emphasis is laid on poultry and live stock. In still others truck products are especially interesting. In Cobb county a hay show is to be held this autumn. The significant thing is that so many individual counties or groups of counties are conducting these enterprises for the educational stimulus they will have on the immediate neighborhood. A State-wide fair is, to be sure, highly important and commendable, but these smaller fairs which are within reach of every farmer in their particular county or district have a peculiarly direct and intensive value.

Meanwhile the senate continues to debate the tariff, regardless of dire predictions in limited quarters that the bill won't pass.

The House-Hunting Ambassador.

The failure of the United States to provide adequate means for the housing and maintenance of its representatives abroad would be amusing, if it were not so disgraceful. Mr. James W. Gerard, recently appointed ambassador to Germany, is a man of wealth as well as rare ability. His salary of some seventeen thousand dolars a year would scarcely begin to meet the social and diplomatic proprieties of his office. That is bad enough within itself, but the new ambassador has found that at no price whatsoever can he rent a building suitable to the needs of the American embassy; and so it seems that despite his readiness to contribute to this demand from his personal income, our diplomatic corps at Berlin is virtually without an official roof.

The Washington Post aptly comments in this connection that if the postoffice building in any important American city should be destroyed by fire and the Postoffice department were unable to rent quarters adequate to the needs of the service and the public's convenience, "an emergency bill would be rushed through Congress appropriating a million or two. It would be everywhere agreed that a new and better postoffice was the only course open to a self-respecting government." Yet, despite the far-reaching importance of our State department, whose embassies, legations and consulates are truly described as so many branch offices, its interests in this respect are neglected year after year in the face of the most urgent and embarrassing conditions.

Congress should provide livable salaries for the government's foreign representatives and should also provide permanent quarters for them. The predicament of Ambassador Gerard is a disgrace to the nation.

European Farming.

Mr. Harvie Jordan's address to the Legislature Thursday evening was an interesting and very seasonable account of the recent European tour of the United States commision which visited the principal countries of the Old World, investigating agricultural methods and, particularly, rural credit systems. As Georgia's representative on this commission, Mr. Jordan had abundant oportunity to study the needs and posibilities of his own State in the light of conditions abroad.

He was especially impressed by the diversity of crops on European farms, a fact which makes for the farmer's material indep ndence; and in this connection he reminded his audience that Georgia's annual importation of food supplies costs some thirty-six million dollars more than the total value of her cotton crop. It need scarcely be said that so long as this great disparity between production and consumption of foodstuffs continues, the State will be grievously handicapped. The movement now under way to increase Georgia's corn yield, to encourage truck gardening and to develop the live-stock industry is one of the most important and praiseworthy in the state's history, for, upon its progress depends not only the welfare of the farm but also the growth of every field of business.

Mr. Jordan witnessed the further fact that in Europe the average wheat yield is from thirty to forty bushels an acre, while in this country it is only from twelve to fifteen bushels. The difference is due to the almost universal practice of intensive methods of cul.vation in the Old World. Such methods, it is cheering to note, are being applied more and more broadly in Georgia, though in this as in other spheres of scientific agriculture much remains to be accomplished.

The system of rural credits which has proved so helpful and stimulating to European farmers were perhaps the most important subject studied by the American commission. That some such system, adapted to the needs of this country, is sorely needed everyone agrees. It is frequently the case, as Mr. Jordan indicated, that our farmers must mortgage their crops up to the hilt and pay back-breaking interest for short-term loans, in consequence of which they have to sell a crop as soon as it is gathered, accepting whatever price is offered. Mr. Jordan's review of the commission's work has aroused keen interest in its complete report and recommendations which are forthcoming.

TREE SURGERY

By Frederic J. Haskin

A group of interested spectators upon a city square are eagerly watching a man who is "doing something" to a tree. What the "something" is no one seems to know but the man himself. He has two assistants. One of them carries a bucket of tar and several brushes. The other has a rough box and a paddle for mixing small quantities of cement. The man has been observed working at that tree at intervals for several days. Now he is finishing his work. A number of branches have been cut off. Now the wounds are being coated well with the tar so that they will not admit moisture and cause the tree to decay. At one side of the trunk is a good-sized hole. A squirrel used to live in it and hide nuts there. The man cleans out the nut shells and with sharp tools chisels out all the decayed fiber down to the clean white wood. Now he is going to fill that hole with cement. After a few years, if he does his work well, the bark will grow over that filling so that there will hardly be a scar upon the trunk of the tree to indicate that there once was a great rotten place that would soon have caused it to die.

• • •

The man who does this wonderful work is called a tree surgeon, and sometimes a tree dentist, because he puts fillings in trees in just the same way that a dentist puts filling in a tooth. Men, women and children are interested in his work because he saves the trees which sometimes they have known and loved for years. There were never so many tree doctors at work in this country as are engaged this summer, because the people in every state are becoming more interested in saving their trees.

• • •

True surgery is one of the newest callings, and one which is just beginning to be recognized. The facilities for acquiring the profession of tree surgery are limited as yet to less than half a dozen institutions which have formed special departments for this work. Consequently, tree doctors are not plentiful and their remuneration seems enormous to those who have never stopped to consider the real value a fine tree is to a town or community. The mayor of a western city said last year, "Five thousand dollars is a modest estimate of the value of one of the big elm trees belonging to this town, and we are going to save them if possible." So a tree surgeon was brought from the east. He put stout iron bolts through both of the large branches of one of the trees just above where it began to divide. In this way he prevented it splitting apart as several similar trees in the same town had done. He cleaned out rotten places and filled up cavities with cement. He cut off branches and unwieldly limbs. For three weeks he attended to the trees of that town visiting each daily as a physician does his patients. When all were in good order he presented a bill for five hundred dollars which the town was glad to pay.

• • •

The same processes are being applied to trees in all parts of the country. It is most desirable when it saves historic trees which have a peculiar value to a community, although it is quite worth while to give the same care to any tree which has acquired sufficient spread of branches and width of trunk to provide shade and to improve the health of a locality. In Charleston, S. C., treatment has recently been given to the council tree, a magnificent magnolia which has stood since colonial times. Several important council meetings have been held under its branches, and the townspeople think it well worth while to preserve it from the fate which overtook the famous Penn Treaty tree of Philadelphia.

• • •

In Boston, in Providence, and in a number of other New England towns old trees dating back to colonial days are being preserved for future generations. In New Orleans a group of live oaks which belonged to one of the early estates were last year turned over to the tree doctors with good results. In Quincy, Ill., the citizens are rejoicing over the preservation of some fine old park trees which last year seemed doomed to extinction. So keen is the interest in the work that women's clubs and village improvement associations are vieing with each other in raising funds to pay for the services of a tree doctor in towns where public treasury seems inadequate.

• • •

Tree surgery is distinct from forestry work, although eventually it will no doubt form one of the courses of study in the forestry schools. Thousands of trees valuable both for their benefit to their communities and for historic association have been ruthlessly sacrificed in the past because of the ignorance and neglect of those who should have cared for them. John Davey, the veteran pioneer of practical tree surgery in America, waxes warm over the tree life thus ruthlessly sacrificed by the "tree butchers" who thoughtlessly clip a sprig here and cut a branch there without any care as to the closing of the wound or the needless waste of sap, which is the blood of the tree. He is advocating a campaign of public education for the children of this country upon this subject in order that the trees of the future may be better cared for. Tree surgery consists of the proper pruning of trees and the care of all wounds, both new and old.

• • •

Every rotten spot upon a tree is the result of some wound or injury which may have been received when the tree was young. Because it was neglected it developed rot and decay just as the neglected wound of an animal may suppurate and produce serious conditions. Every cut or wound made in a tree should be promptly protected by a coating of tar or lead paint applied from two to four days after the cutting so that the surface may be dry enough to absorb it properly. In exceptional cases this coating may be applied immediately after the cutting, when to do it later would necessitate the dangerous reclimbing of a high tree. Large wounds should be inspected each year and painted or tarred until they are completely healed over. If cracks or scars appear upon the surface these should be carefully filled with tar or paint to keep out moisture.

• • •

The time of pruning is important. It should be be done when there is the least flow of sap and when there is the longest possible growing season to assist in healing the wound. The method of cutting off branches is also important. In removing a large limb an undercut should be made first in order to prevent splitting slivers of bark and wood from the trunk. In taking off a large heavy branch it is better to cut off the main body first at a distance of several feet from the trunk after which the stub can be amputated without danger of ruining the tree.

• • •

No protruding stumps of limbs must be left. They give the tree an unsightly appearance and are rarely if ever healed over. Even after many years the exposed wood may admit decay into the trunk of the tree. The tree doctor frequently finds his heaviest work in curing the decay resultant from these protuberances which need never have begun if the first cutting had been properly done.

• • •

Filling the cavity of a great tree is an interesting operation both to the tree doctor and the many people who like to watch his work. After the cavity has been thoroughly cleaned out a thin coating of tar is applied. Creosote was formerly used for this purpose, but has been discontinued because it has been found to penetrate the wood of the tree and to escape through the bark. After the first coating has dried a heavier one is applied. This, too, is thoroughly dried before the filling is applied. The filling is mixed according to the size of the cavity. For a small cavity one part Portland cement and two parts sand are used. For the main part of a large cavity a mixture of two parts cement to one part gravel is preferable. This mixture should be run into the cavity in a semi-liquid form and allowed to set for several days. Then the top filling of cement and sand is applied. This last is dyed as nearly the color of the tree as possible.

AN AUGUST GARDEN.

The garden says 'tis August,
The Rose of Sharon blooms,
And hydrangea hardy
Displays her weighty plumes.

Worthier geraniums
There ne'er were to admire,
So set beside the crimson phlox,
They seem to be afire.

Oh, such fine growth of zinnia;
Oh, daintiest of heads;
See how they pose jauntily atop
And view the pansy beds.

Gladiolus in crimson, too,
Beside elephant's ears,
A gayer queen of carnival
Than golden glow appears.

Begonia lines this path,
There's the coreopsis,
And dusty miller in the sun—
No hard-earned rest is his.

Now, gaze upon superb bloom—
Dahlia in her glory,
Who oft to towering hollyhock
Tells her botanic story.

Thank you, thank you, Gardener,
For the inspiring view
That comes to us from your great skill,
And bounteous sun and dew.

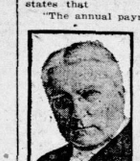
HIRE THE MAYOR!

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

The Bureau of Municipal Research of New York states that



"The annual payments for permanent debt have increased nearly six times as much in the last ten years as has the population and one and one-half times as fast as the total budget.

"In the last five years the debt has increased three times as fast as the population and nearly one and one-half times as fast as the total budget."

How long would any private business enterprise tolerate such a state of things?

This is but one specification in support of the charge that American cities are notoriously mismanaged. In the most important affair of the people, that of running a city, there is rock-rooted, time-honored, and apparently hopeless incompetency and crookedness.

The police have been convicted of graft, graft has come to be expected in every paving contract, theft and waste abound.

There is one main cause for this. It is the presence of political party organizations in city elections.

How is it possible for any one outside of a madhouse to suppose that it makes any difference whether the mayor and aldermen that control our cities are Democrats or Republicans?

Some cities of secondary size have seen this. They have devised a system of government by commission. Beginning with Galveston and Des Moines, dozens of cities have adopted this plan.

The substance of it is that the mayor is hired, just as any factory or department store would hire a manager, because he is capable, and without reference to his general ideas on national politics.

German cities when they want a mayor seek out an expert engineer and financier and employ him. He has nothing at all to do with political partisanship.

If this plan is rational and good for the smaller American municipalities and for German cities, and it has proved uniformly successful, why is it not good for the enormous and complicated situation in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia?

Little by little the American people are learning the slow lesson that the political party is no means for giving force to the opinion of the people; that it is always the agent of corruption; and that the boss-managed city business is invariably an agency of swindling and incompetency.

Youth and Old Age

(Milwaukee Journal.)

In a memorable passage in a memorable book Samuel Butler says: "Autumn is the mellower season, and what we lose in flowers we more than gain in fruits." Fontenelle at the age of ninety, being asked what was the happiest time of his life, said he did not know that he had ever been much happier than he then was, but that perhaps his best years had been those when he was between fifty-five and seventy-five, and Dr. Johnson placed the pleasures of old age far higher than those of youth.

The comparative pleasure of old age and youth has always been a favorite theme of debate, and there have been few men who have lived wisely who have not echoed the opinion of Fontenelle and Johnson. But the joys of age are not those of youth.

To travel joyously over the down slope you must have acquired in youth tastes and interests which do not disappear as bodily vigor wanes. Excessive devotion to the so-called practical activities of life, or to bodily pleasure in its various terms, leads almost inevitably to a tedious and embittered senility.

Count up the happy old men and women of your acquaintance and you will find that they are the ones who have laid up a rich store of intellectual wealth. The proper pleasures of life's autumn are those of the intellect, and if you have been too busy or too lazy to acquire the taste for such pleasures you can expect your declining years to be at best merely a vacant, joyless waiting for the end.

Wasting Time

(Answers, London.)

Enraptured, they gazed, hand-in-hand, upon the beautiful scene stretched before them in the setting sun. 'Twas the lake district, and they but three days upon their honeymoon.

"Dearest," he said, gazing at her fondly, "isn't this heavenly?"

"Yes, Reginald," she softly murmured.

"Do you know," he whispered ardently, "to me life does not seem long enough for our happiness. Just think, even if we are fortunate, our married life can hardly last longer than fifty years."

"Is that all?" she queried wonderingly, edging nearer.

"Yes, that's so," a touch of sadness in his voice. "Only fifty years in which to love each other."

"Then kiss me quick, Reginald," she exclaimed. "we're wasting time!"

Quips and Quiddities

The Woman Who Saw made her way to the hosiery counter of a big department store and asked to see some sheer lisle stockings. A nonchalant clerk responded, lifting down a slim red box with one hand and adjusting a hairpin with the other.

"These are a little heavy," said the shopper. "Haven't you any thinner hose than these?" The clerk pushed in another hairpin.

"Sorry, madam," he said sanguidly, "but that's the thinnest hose we have in the house."

John Butts, Sr.—Yes, I want to make some reparation to Royal for allowing his mother to give him such a fool name!

Judge Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, told one the other night which leaves no doubt as to the welcome the minister receives in certain quarters when making a pastoral call.

Some time ago, the judge said, the minister was expected to visit the home of a good brother, but it was not absolutely certain that he would come. Finally, however, the dominie appeared, and little Willie, who had been watching at the gate, sounded the tidings with glad acclaim.

"Whoopee!" joyously cried the youngster, wildly tossing up his hat. "Hip, hip, hurrah! Here he comes, mamma! Here he comes!"

"You seem very glad to see me, Willie," smiled the preacher, patting the boy on the head and shaking hands with the family.

"You just bet I am!" enthusiastically replied Willie. "I have been afraid all the morning you wouldn't show up!"

"That's awfully nice of you, Willie," said the parson. "Why were you afraid I wouldn't come?"

"Because," was the startling rejoinder of the youngster, "if you hadn't come we wouldn't have chicken for dinner."

SUNDAY SONGS AND SERMONS

REV. ALEX W. BEALER WRITES ON THE ASSEMBLY

Big Gathering of Baptists at Blue Ridge in Fifth Annual Session—Many Fine Sermons and Lectures — Concerts by Orchestra—Assembly Grounds to Have City Improvements

BY REV. ALEX W. BEALER.

BLUE RIDGE, Ga., Aug. 9.—Rev. J. H. Coin, pastor of the Baptist church at Cordele, Ga., and for some time a missionary in the Panama canal bone, under the home mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, delivered an interesting lecture to the assembly in session here.

Mr. Coin said that in Panama the flowers are beautiful but have no perfume, the birds are of gay plumage but have no song, and the negroes numerous but utterly devoid of any sentiment. Strange to say, they have no ear for music; they cannot sing and they never display any emotion in a religious meeting. There are very few pure blooded Spaniards on the isthmus, nearly every person born there having negro blood in his veins. The work of the missionary among the whites is very unsatisfactory, since the population is so shifting. A church of 300 members might be organized today but in a month not 100 would be in the country. There is, however, a wonderful work being done among the negro natives.

This is the fifth year of the assembly at Blue Ridge and a large number of Baptists from the surrounding country and from other sections of the state are in attendance, some in cottages and many living in tents. The weather has been ideal, a delightful breeze blowing all the day, and the nights being so cool that blankets are needed.

The assembly was planned for a three weeks' session this year, opening the last Sunday in July. It will close on August 17.

During the first week the speakers were Dr. E. C. Durgan, of Macon; Dr. E. J. Forrester, of Macon; Dr. A. B. Vaughan, of LaGrange, and George W. Andrews, of Atlanta.

Dr. F. C. McConnell, of Waco, Tex., who is a native Georgian, has been delivering a character sermon each day at 11 o'clock and will continue them until the close of the meeting.

Beginning last Monday and running to the close of the assembly, the Woman's Baptist Missionary union of the state, under the leadership of Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, the president, held a successful meeting.

The assembly orchestra has been giving daily concerts which have been very favorably received. The orchestra is made up of the following young men: Charles Sanders, Jr., pianist; J. L. Moore, cornetist; C. M. Nesbit, trombone. R. L. Terrell, cornetist, and G. W. Walter, clarionet.

The entertainment feature has not been overlooked, here have been several concerts in which Mrs. John W. Arnold, of Monroe; Miss Mabel Whitney, of Atlanta; Miss Elizabeth Lee, of Augusta, and Miss Dixie Vestel, of Blue Ridge, took part, assisted by Rev. Alex W. Bealer, of Eastman. By special request Mr. Bealer last Thursday night repeated his lecture on "The Georgia Darkey," as given three years ago before the assembly. He will also assist in several other entertainments before the close of the assembly.

Negotiations are under way at this time which make it practically certain that the water pipes from the city waterworks will be extended to the assembly grounds before the opening of the next session. he city lights are already in, the cottages and when there is water and sewerage, this will be an ideal place in which to spend the summer.

In the immediate neighborhood of Blue Ridge the government has 200,000 acres of land in the Appalachian forest reserve. Through this property, which runs across some of the finest mountain scenery in the state, a splendid road is to be constructed by the government at an early date. It is only seven miles from the assembly grounds to this road and when this connecting link is made it will add to the attractiveness of Blue Ridge as a resort.

The Mary Willingham Industrial School for Girls, named in honor of Mrs. E. G. Willingham, of Atlanta, is going up as fast as it is possible for the work to be done. This school is under the auspices of the Woman's Baptist Missionary union and is destined to do a great work among the mountain girls.

NOONDAY MEETING AT A. C. L. SHOPS IN WAYCROSS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WAYCROSS, Ga., Aug. 9.—Starting with an attendance so small that it seemed almost useless to attempt to have services, the Friday noon religious meeting at the immense shops of the Atlantic Coast Line in Waycross has grown to be one of the most important meetings of the week in the city and the attendance now reaches around 500 every week.

The idea for such meetings originated in the city Y. M. C. A. two years ago, and through the hard work of the secretary, B. N. Norvell, permission for holding one meeting every two weeks was secured.

As a result of the shop meetings, men who probably never get to church hear the gospel preached and have taken keen interest in the work of the Y. M. C. A. The workmen have gotten so they look forward with pleasure to the Friday noon meetings and their work is never so hard but what they attend.

At the extreme right in the group is Secretary Norvell, and in front of him Rev. R. A. Brown, of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. Osgood F. Cook, of the First Methodist church.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TOPICS

(Copyright, 1913, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

The Passover. Ex. xii:1-42.

Golden Text—The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Matt. xx:28.

(1.) Verses 1-2—How does God today convey his messages to sis people other than through the Bible?

(2.) What reason is there to believe that there never was a time when God did not in some way communicate with His people?

(3.) Verses 4-6—Who were the persons that had to provide the lamb to keep this passover?

(4.) What would you say was the reason that God made this passover a family ceremony rather than congregational?

(5.) Which would you say is the more important, and why, the church or the home?

(6.) What is the relative importance of congregational and family worship?

(7.) Verses 7-10—Why was the blood of the lamb to be sprinkled on the two side posts and on the upper doorposts of the houses?

(8.) What is the ground of a Christian's hope of salvation?

(9.) How was the flesh of the lamb to be cooked, and in what manner was it to be eaten?

(10.) Verses 11-13—What was the reason that they had to eat it in such haste with every preparation for a journey?

(11.) Ought we to eat all our meals and why, in readiness for sudden departure from this life?

(12.) Why did God visit Egypt with this awful calamity of slaying the first-born in all their homes?

(13.) What is the proof that sin always results in death?

(14.) Verses 14-20—From that day until now what has been the attitude of the Jews to this feast of the passover?

(15.) What is the difference between the passover feast and the feast of unleavened bread?

(16.) What does "leaven" stand for when used figuratively in the Bible?

(17.) What has been the practical benefit of this annual memorial service?

(18.) Of what benefit are memorials generally and particularly of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper?

(19.) Verses 2-28—What time of the day were they to commence this passover feast?

(20.) What are the chief features in connection with this feast, and in what order did they come?

(21.) Suppose that any family had neglected to sprinkle the blood, as they had been commanded, what would probably have been the result?

(22.) In what way does this passover feast, as practiced by the Jews today, prove that this account of the slaughter of the first born in Egypt is true?

(23.) Verses 29-33—What effect does an awful personal or family calamity generally have upon hitherto hardened sinners?

(24.) Why did not Pharaoh, and why do not so many others, obey God until they are in the grip of death?

(25.) Verses 34-36—When the Egyptians gave of their treasures to the Israelites, did they expect any return?

(26.) Verses 37-42—How many years had Israel been in Egypt; how many went in, and how many came out?

CAMPMEETING BEGINS AT LAWRENCEVILLE MONDAY

It Was Founded Nearly a Hundred Years Ago—Large Attendance Expected

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 9.—The Lawrenceville camp meeting will begin Monday night, August 11, and continue until the following Sunday night. Much interest centers in this historic camp ground.

Founded nearly a hundred years ago, many of the south's greatest preachers have worked in these annual meetings, and untold good has come to this section of the state through them.

It is a time for reunions of ties of friendship and kinspeople gather from long distances to enjoy the social and religious benefits to be had.

This year practically every tent will be occupied.

More than the usual number of strong preachers are to be present and a greater meeting is expected than has been held in years.

Rev. Luke G. Johnson, the efficient presiding elder, and Rev. J. T. Eakes, local pastor, will be in charge.

They will be assisted by Dr. T. R. Kendall, of Gainesville; Rev. William Dunbar, of Winder; Dr. G. W. Yarbrough, of Jefferson; Rev. W. F. King, of Monroe; Rev. S. B. Ledbetter, of Buford; Rev. V. T. Lanford, of Norcross; Rev. Z. V. Hawks, of Duluth, and Rev. W. R. Foote, of Dalton.

Baptist News Notes

The Rev. J. M. Skelton, pastor of the East Side Tabernacle Baptist church, will conduct revival meetings during the ten days at Antioch church, in the Mulberry association. Mr. Skelton has resigned the East Side Tabernacle church and will move to Mansfield the first of September. He has accepted the pastorate of that church.

The Rev. A. V. Pickern has resigned the pastorate of the Immanuel Baptist church to accept a call elsewhere. He is conducting revival services at the Buckhead Baptist church this week and will continue the services during the next week. Rev. E. A. Peacock is the pastor of the church.

The Rev. H. S. Wallace, pastor of the Jones Avenue church, is conducting revival services at Clayton, Ga. He will be out of the city about ten days. His church will be supplied Sunday by Rev. P. T. Taylor, of Florida.

The Tabernacle Baptist church will be supplied Sunday by Rev. C. W. Durden, of Tifton, Ga. Mr. Durden is one of the strongest young preachers in the state. No doubt many will be glad to hear him.

The Rev. W. W. Landrum, D. D., former pastor of the First Baptist church, will supply the Second church Sunday, in the absence of Dr. White, the pastor.

The Rev. Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, is on his vacation. He spent this week in Asheville, N. C. A commission was appointed at the last meeting of the Southern Baptist convention to consider the advisability of some modifications and changes in the methods of the convention in its administrative work. This is one of the most important movements in the convention during the past few years.

The Rev. S. C. Williams, pastor of the Stewart Avenue and Sharon churches, has resigned these churches to accept the superintendency of the Masonic Orphans' home, Montgomery, Ala. He preaches his farewell sermon at Stewart Avenue church Sunday night.

ILLUSTRATED SERMONS AT WESLEY MEMORIAL

Brilliant Pictures in Colors Will Be Shown at Evening Services

During the month of August a series of illustrated sermons will be given at Wesley Memorial church at each of the night services.

The views to be shown are brilliant reproductions in colors of the world's masterpieces, by artists like Dore, Beale and Hoffman.

On Sunday night "The Resurrection Story" will be given, including Hoffman's famous picture, "Christ at the Door."

On the following Sundays the subjects will be, "The Life of Moses" and "The Acts of the Apostles." Special music, including illustrated hymns, will be rendered at every service by the chorus choir and soloists.

After Winning Game Cracker Hurler Blows and Another Is Lost

Love Pounded In the Ninth And Vols Won

Crackers Apparently Had the Game Won Handily Until Last Round—Work of Joe Agler Was the Main Feature

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 8.—The original come back stunt was pulled by the Vols on Friday when they wiped out a 4 to 2 lead in the ninth, winning the game by a 5 to 4 score with none out.

The Crackers got off with three in first when they nestled against Fleharty's curves for three hits, one of which was a triple by Lorimy Long. These coupled with two passes and two errors netted three runs.

After the rat inning Fleharty seemed to tighten up while Love threatened more and more as the game progressed to queer things with his wildness.

In the second inning a wonderful throw from right nipped Agler at the plate and saved a run.

In the seventh the Crackers made their total four and seemingly foreclosed their mortgage on the same. Agler singled, Lindsay allowed all hands safety when Welchonce rolled him one which he did not see fit to handle. Smith's sacrifice scored Joe.

All through the game Love was wild but in the ninth with the score four to two he faded completely away.

Young beat out a roller and Jud Daley ran him when he wrenched his knee. Berry drew four bad ones, Hoffman singled and Daley counted. The other two runs were poled in by Gibson who followed with a safety over short.

Joe Agler, the visiting first baseman, had one large day at bat. He was up five times ,walking twice ,hitting safely twice and scoring twice.

Johnson Now Has Record

Walter Johnson arrived with the American league's record for straight wins for the season of 1913. On Friday Johnson turned his twelfth straight trick. In Friday's battle he worked against Joe Birmingham's men and led them down by the score of 4 to 3. He allowed eight hits.

This is the second game this week for the smoky lad of Grimth's crew. On Wednesday he came through again with the White Sox by the score of 11 to 2. This time allowing only three hits.

Cy Faulkenberg was hailed as the "comer back" here when he won ten straight victories early in the season, and "Lefty" Boehling, Johnson's fellow Senato-chute junior sensation—was acclaimed as the young phenom when he tora off eleven straights. Now Johnson has hung up a new mark for the American league heavers of twelve in a row.

For the whole season Johnson has participated in thirty-two games. He has won twenty-four, lost five and tied one. Two games he started count neither as wins nor losses.

He is leading the American league with a percentage of .829.

Use Thompson Against Vols

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 9.—In the game here Saturday the visitors will use Thompson and Chapman as their battery, since Thompson objects to hurling on Sunday, and the game which President Kavanaugh has ordered played over will be played on Sunday.

The local's battery will be More and Gibson.

The Volunteers have now put the Crackers on the defensive and they must win two straight games to get an even break in the series, while one more win for the locals will give them the same record that Atlanta made against them on their last appearance at Ponce de Leon park.

Swimmer Out For New Mark

Michael McDermott, of the Illinois Athletic club of Chicago, America's champion and record holder in breast stroke swimming, will attempt to create a new 200-yard standard at the water carnival to be held at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, on August 27, 28 and 29, in connection with the Perry Centennial celebrations, and confidence is felt that he will succeed in the undertaking.

The young westerner has bettered the classic figures several times already in the past and he is now moving faster than ever. It is a foregone conclusion that he will capture the central championship title, at stake in the coming event, and if conditions are not unfavorable there is no doubt that he will lower the open water mark now obtaining.

McDermott, although but twenty years old, has been the peer of our breast stroke swimmers since 1910 and competed for this country at the Stockholm Oympics, defeating many of the leading European cracks. He is a stocky, powerful young athlete, standing 5 feet 6 1-2 inches, and weighing 160 pounds.

CHANGESFOR JUST A DAY

The Billies kept their hold on first place by handling the Vols easily, while Mobile was rained out. Although Atlanta lost her game, she is again tied with the Billies for first place by reason of their loss of a double header.

The Giants were beaten out by a ninth inning rally, while the Phillies fairly snowed their opponents under. The difference is now six whole games.

The Athletes were beaten by the White Sox, but as Cleveland was vainly endeavoring to solve Walter Johnson's fast one, the relative standing of these clubs did not change.

STARS OF ONE DAY

Al Demaree: After winning nine straights he was credited with a loss Friday. He relieved Jeff Tesreau in the seventh, but did not stop Cincy.

Bobby Byrne: Did not lambast one in four trials.

Mike Balenti: Who is making a strong bid for a regular berth with St. Louis, accepted six chances at short and got one hit.

Derrill Pratt: Hit safely twice in five times up.

Zach Wheat: Could do no better than one out of four.

Red Smith: Did not increase his batting average a bit. He was up three times and failed to hit.

Dode Paskert: Got one out of four.

Al Bridwell: Could not connect in three times up.

James Archer: Hit safely once in three times up.

Tris Speaker: Got one out of four.

Yerkes: Could not hit safely in four times up.

Joe Jackson batted .333 for the day, getting one hit in three times up.

German Athletes Seek An American Trainer

(By Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—An athletic mission left here Friday for America to secure, if possible, the services of A. C. Kraenzlein, German-American hurdler, as athletic adviser and trainer to the German track team for the 1916 games.

Leaders of the athletic movement here hope that the German team with the help of Kraenzlein will prove as successful in 1916 as was the Swedish team in 1912 at Stockholm. The Swedes were coached by the American trainer Ernie Hjerthery.

If Kraenzlein will not accept the offer some other American trainer will be engaged.

Dissention Is Huge Setback To New York

Fight Between Manager McGraw ad Players Gives the Phillies a Good Chance to Win the Pennant

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 9.—It developed today that trouble which has been brewing in the ranks of the Giants ever since McGraw traded "Doc" Crandall for Larry McLean, broke out Thursday night in an exchange of ficticuffs between several players and Manager McGraw. Crandall was very popular among the members of the club and there were many mutterings when McGraw traded him for McLean. McGraw spoke of the trade as a "swift" thing for the Giants, saying that he had obtained a great catcher for a pitcher who was never a star and who had passed the stage of being of any great use to a first division ball club.

This annoyed Mathewson and Merkle, great friends of Crandall. It was about midnight, when five of the Giants' team, who had been spending the evening together, were talking of Crandall's trade for Larry.

When McGraw took his athletes to task for their late hours, hot words were exchanged and several blows were struck. Two of the players prevented the matter becoming a general fight, and the party finally returned in a body to their hotel. Beyond a bloody nose, said to have been sustained by McGraw, no damage was done.

The New York Giants are yet far from winning a National league pennant, though the club is right now six games ahead of Red Doon's Phillies. Internal trouble is right now nobbing up and it is possible ,that this will ruin the chances of the New Yorkers to come out in front.

Ten days ago the Giants were going like a house afire while the Phillies were in a bad slump and at that time the wise ones began to figure the race all over, predicting that the Giants would win the flag handsomely and then trim the American league champions. Today it is an entirely different story. The Phillies have re-entered the race while the Giants are not regarded as a certainty.

When it first became noticeable that the Giants were in a slump there were no rumors of internal trouble, but during the past two days McGraw and several of his players have engaged in a fight and now the chances of the Giants to cop look eevn smaller. They looked rather bad before the trouble bobbed up, but with strife in the rank and file they are hurt beyond measure.

John McGraw has a mighty good ball club. It knows baseball from A to Z, but when the players are dissatisfied they are not going to play their best ball. And right now they are dissatisfied and the Phillies with satisfied players is a stronger club than the Giants with several players on the grumbling list. The opportunity is there, it is pointed out that Christy Mathewson is one of those who is peeved at McGraw.

The trouble between McGraw and his players came about when he traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. Crandall was very popular with his teammates and the away cared them to enter objection to the extent of insulting the manager. The result of the fight was o loss for the Giants in the game at Cincinnati on Friday and may pave the way for a number of other defeats.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Jackson and Cobb continue to hold their deadlock around the .400 mark.

Neither seems to better the other's work much, Jackson on Thursday got one out of three; Cobb got two out of four. With these stunts figured in their averages stand:

Jackson ..	103	366	78	144	.394
Cobb.. ..	77	258	45	100	.388

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 9.—"Bob" McAllister and "Sailor" Ed Petroskey, local middle weights ,fought twenty rounds to a draw here tonight.

HOW CLUBS PLAY TODAY

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Walker and Adams, for New Orleans, and E. Brown or Manning and Gribbens behind the plate, for Montgomery, were the probable batteries for the second game of the series this afternoon. The weather was clear and warm. A double-header is scheduled for Sunday.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 9.—Chattanooga and Birmingham will play a doubleheader this afternoon, closing the series for the season on the local field. Weather fair and warm. Batteries first game: Chattanooga, Powell and Graham; Birmingham, Hardgrove and Clifton. Second game: Chattanooga, Kroh and Street; Birmingham, Prough and Clifton.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 9.—On account of rain and wet grounds Friday a double header will be played by the Mobile and Memphis clubs here this afternoon, the first game starting at 2:15 o'clock with weather permitting. W. Robertson and Bradley Hogg with Schmidt's catching both games will be the battery artists for the local club, while Manager Benhard will work Newton and Seabaugh in the first contest and Klapman and Snell in the second. Checks for $50 for hitting the ball sign on their home grounds will be presented this afternoon to players Hearwald and Shanley, of the Memphis club.

Fanned 14 Batters

AUBURN, Ga., Aug. 9.—Auburn and Plow Boys crossed bats on the latter's grounds, and Auburn won a pitcher's battle, 4 to 3, Sloan for Auburn, struck out twelve men, while Lyle, for Plow Boys, struck out fourteen men.

It was the hardest game Auburn has won.

Rowing Races Start

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 9.—The interest of rowing enthusiasts the country over centered today on the Charles river basin, where the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen began its annual two days' regatta. Ninety-one of the best scullers and oarsmen of the United States and Canada were entered for the thirteen events.

TWO LIVE MEMBERS ARE NUMBERED AMONG STALLINGS' HUBTOWN CLUB

Diminutive Maranville and Hard-Hitting McDonald Are Stars of the Highest Class—Maranville Stars in All Departments, While McDonald Leads the Hitters of the National League, but Is Weak at the Fielding End of the Game

The leading slugger of the National league is McDonald, the Boston outfielder, who, however, is not much of a fielder. If he could field as well as he can hit, he would be about the most valuable man George Stallings has on his pay roll.

As a hitter, McDonald ranks high. He has looked over the offerings of the best pitchers in the league and they all look alike. He whangs the ball hard and with an abandon that is disheartening, but as a fielder he is nix.

Boston has a wonderful shortstop in Maranville. The boy will some day be one of the cogs of a real infield, for those who know Stallings realize that if he is let alone he will give the Hub a team worth while.

Just now Boston has only a few men upon whom the high lights shine, and Maranville is the best of the lot as fielder, base runner and batter. Barring accidents, he will be one of the best shortstops that ever played the game after another year of the seasoning process.

M'NEIL FURNISHED THRILLS BY HIS SENSATIONAL SPEED

After Getting Couple of Laps Behind in 25-Mile Race, He Opened Up

"Another Richmond in the field." The twenty-five mile grind at the 'Drome Friday night failed to show the old guard crossing the white line in the lead, instead Luther Lutner broke into the win column and pulled down the biggest race yet staged on the Prince Edward circuit.Incidentally it is the first time Luther has led the field at the finish since he has been racing in Atlanta. He has been pegging away consistently in all the races and now since he has found out how it feels to see no one ahead of him he is likely to figure in future races with the winners.

Freddie took the lead at the crack of the gun and held it until the red flag announced him winner. He ran his race steady and consistently, maintained an average speed of eighty-one miles an hour. Occasionally he would get in the spurts but not often. He had his course mapped out and stuck by it faithfully. Luther's winning of this southern championship race will cause the hottest rivalry in future races and if he can only repeat Friday night's performance more fun is slated for the spectators.

It remained for Morty Graves to pull down the fastest time for the night's racing. He had his old trot humming at 86 3-4 miles an hour 1 nthe final heat of the Motordrome purse race, which he copped in easy style.

Harry Glenn and George Lockner fought three heats without establishing a claim. The first heat was declared dead, the second heat went to Glenn but he failed to take the third. This match race will be scheduled again Tuesday night. Both riders believe they can win and it will be a lovely speed tussle-fight.

Though out of the big pie division the old guard was not entirely lost in the shuffle. Tex Richard, riding a crippled car, won a five mile invitation race in fair time. Jack McNeil developed engine trouble in his old J. A. P. but would get back in the big race and start a scrapping dance only to have to drop it when his engine failed him. His spurts in the twenty-five mile race were the fastest of the night but his losses he managed to finish second.

The complete results follow:

FIVE-THOUSAND PURSE.

(One-Mile Heats; Two Mile Final.)

First Heat—Morty Graves, first; Tex Richards ,second. Time, :44 2-5.

Second Heat—Harry Swartz, first; George Renal ,second. Time, :42 2-5.

Third Heat—Jack McNeil ,first; Henry Levin ,second. Time, :43 2-5.

Final—Morty Graves, first; Harry Swartz, second; George Renal, third. Time, 1:27 3-5.

SECOND MATCH RACE.

(Between Harry Glenn and George Lockner, best two out of three, two-mile heats.)

First Heat—Declared dead heat. Time, 1:27 3-5.

Second Heat—Won by Glenn. Time, 1:27 2-5.

Third Heat—Won by Lockner. Time, 1:28 2-5.

INVITATION RACE.

(Five Miles, Open to All Comers.)

Won by Tex Richards; George Renal, second. Time, 3:25.

TWENTY-FIVE RACE.

(Championship of the South.)

Won by Freddie Luther; Jack McNeil, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 18:27 2-5.

CRACKERS GET HURLER

After Jack Johnson

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The newspapers here say that the American boxing federation has requested the French federation to prohibit Jack Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France.

Flynn Beaten To a Frazzle

Gunboat Smith Proves Too Good for the Fireman From Pueblo

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Gunboat Smith, of California, defeated Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, in the fifth round of their scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Smith knocked Flynn down four times in the fifth round and the referee stopped the fight to save Flynn from being knocked out.

Smith weighed 183 1-2 pounds and Flynn was five pounds heavier. At the start Flynn rushed Smith to the ropes in the latter's corner, working to the body with short-arm blows. Smith broke away and began jabbing, finally catching Flynn with a right uppercut to the face. Honors were even at the end of the round.

In the second round Flynn tried to get close, but Smith kept him at long range, scoring point after point. At the end of the round, Flynn managed to land a right hook to the head. This round and the three following were in Smith's favor.

Both men held to their original tactics, Flynn boring in while Smith tried to avoid infighting. At the end of the third round, Smith was bleeding from the nose and Flynn from a cut over the left eye. In the fourth round Flynn landed a short-arm hok on Smith's left eye, which started bleeding. Smith's hard hooks and jabs had Flynn weak at the end of this round.

In the fifth, Flynn swung a terrific right to the jaw, sending Smith to the ropes. The Californian came back with a hail of left and right jabs and hooks. Then, with a right uppercut flush on the jaw, he knocked Flynn down for a count of eight seconds. Another right to the jaw put the Pueblo fireman to the floor for three seconds.

Flynn arose with his face covered with blood, and Smith knocked him down with a right to the jaw, the fireman clinging to his conqueror's legs. Flynn gained his feet once more on a count of three, but he was wobbly, and Smith put him to the floor in Flynn's corner.

This was the last blow of the fight, as Referee Joh stepped between the men to save Flynn from being knocked out. At that momnet the bell rang, ending the fifth round, and Smith tried to continue the fight, but the referee showed him to his corner.

Southern Race Is Very Best Among Minors

All the Class A Clubs Are Indulging in Good Battles This Year, While Majors Are Having Runaway

Of the seven leagues in the national agreement of class A classification and better, the Southern league is furnishing the best pennant race. The American association pushes the Southern a close race with her four first division teams coming within a span of .054 per cent, which is one point better than the Southern's .055, but in the Dixie league there are more thrills.

Those aforementioned thrills come from the fact that one day Montgomery will take the lead with Mobile second and the next day sees conditions reversed, while Atlanta and Birmingham are carrying on a like merry battle with third place at stake and fourth place the penalty of a lost game.

Such a condition of affairs seldom prevails in any league, if the majors could furnish such a race, the owners would have to resort to old Chris Von Der Ahe's plan of hauling the money away in barrels. In the national ,167 points cover the first division, while the younger organization takes up .184.

Taken as a whole the Pacific Coast league is furnishing the best pennant race of any league, that is when you consider the teams in the second division as having any voice at all in the matter. Out there only .082 points separate leading Portland from San Francisco, sixth and last placers.

The teams making runaway races are Newark in the International, Denver in the Western, Giants in the National, and Mackmen in the American. From force of habit, the Minneapolis team is expected to overhaul Milwaukee and Louisville in the association, but still there is going to be a hot finish between these middle western teams that will rival the one the Southern ought to furnish, speaking from conditions as they stack up today.

Although Atlanta in the Southern league is behind the leading Montgomery team, the Crackers are ranked as favorites by fans in other towns beside Atlanta. Manager Flinn, of the Mobile club, now in second place, declares he will have to beat out Atlanta to win the pennant and says he does not fear Dobbs' team.

Atlanta has a chance to finish first in what may prove the best race the Southern league has ever seen, and the best race of 1913 among the seven larger caliber leagues.

The belief in the Crackers is based on four reasons. The first is out of about thirty remaining games, Atlanta has twenty-six on the home grounds. On this reason a volume could be written. The Club's and Dobbers, now first and second, will spend the same time on the road.

No. 2: Hitting of Smith, Welchonce and Long, the three lead the league. Other Crackers are hitting well.

No. 3: Pitching of Dent. He looks good for an average of at least .650 for the rest of season. Improvement in Thompson and Conzelman.

No. 4: Improvement in defense. Chapman is now outcatching anything in the league. Hoffman should settle down, although now a shaky problem, and be a great addition to the team.

Frank Whitney Now Past Due

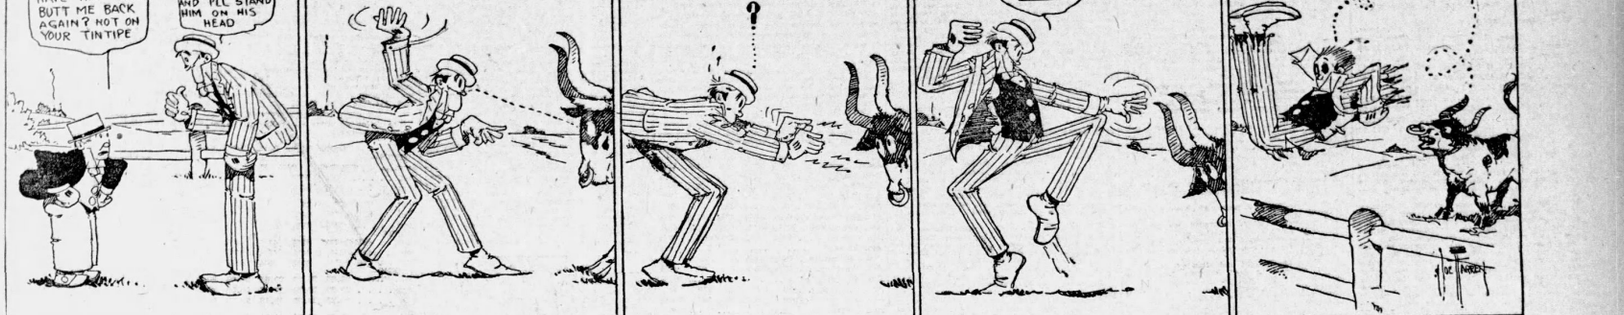
The boxers who are to be stared in the principal bout which is to open Cascade's boxing club still report that they are en route, but as yet they have not arrived. Whitney was to have come to the city yesterday, but up to 9 o'clock last night had not arrived.

Lou Castro stated this morning that he did not know whether or not Whitney had gotten here. Charley White is due Saturday night.

On account of the great interest in these bouts, it was decided some time ago to stage them at the auditorium instead of the skating rink, as had been planned. For this reason the crowd will have ample accommodation, and the bout will be in a convenient place.

Chances of Giants Are Hurt Through Much Internal Trouble

HANK AS A HYPNOTIST ---BY FARREN



THE SPORTLIGHT
BY GRANTLAND RICE

PARALLEL CASES.

Hark to the yarn of Diogenes
Told by the scribes of the old Greek clan;
Forth he fared from his tub of ease,
Probing the scene for an honest man;
Long he searched on his vainless hunt,
Probing each distant nook and cleft,
Till at last he said with a Grecian grunt:
"There ain't none left."

Hark to the case of the baseball scout,
Sent by his magnate far and nigh
After a guy with a winning clout,
Speed and brains and the batting eye;
Long he probes through the distant bush,
Spotting the blokes who are tipped as deft,
And the same words flip from his scowling mush:
"There ain't none left."

The well-known game of life is more or less noted for its sudden shifts and its elastic angles, but in this respect it's a piker's league compared to baseball.

The hero of today in this game is all too often the hobo of tomorrow and 1913 has been no exception to the rule.

There are any number of glittering examples furnished by the comparative data of 1912 and 1913; largely as follows:

JAKE STAHL.

1912—Manager of flag-winning world series champions.
1913—Released like a utility busher in mid-season.

CHARLEY HERZOG.

1912—World series star; led both teams at bat and in the field.
1913—On the bench.

BOSTON RED SOX.

1912—World series champions.
1913—Struggling in the second division of their own league.

FRANK L. CHANCE.

1912—Leading a driving fight to the edge of another pennant.
1913—Managing a tail-end team.

ED WALSH.

1912—Still the iron man of the game; hero of fifty-eight battles and a city series.
1913—Unable to work two games a month; lost in the shuffle.

On the other hand, Col. C. H. Ebbets doesn't have to look as far back as 1912 for any sudden shifts. His club has veered from a pennant winner in May to a red-hot celler contender in August. If variety is the spice of life, the colonel is all to the spice.

John McGraw says that Mathewson when pitching to the big Teuton watches Wagner's feet. If we were pitching to Joe Jackson or Ty Cobb that's also where we'd peg the ball. If a bloke has a weakness you can generally find it by whistling a fast one in among his bunions. If he can hit those there is nothing left but to hide the ball.

Some years ago McGraw started out to find an aide to Matnewson. Since then he has found three in Marquard, Tesreau and Demaree. Which is also one of the main answers to his three seasons of success. One good slabman is hard enough to round up, but when a manager can absorb three within four years the rebuttal is fairly obvious, to be obtained as a rule in the standing of the clubs.

These three discoveries have worked both ways. On the other side of it they have also helped Mathewson to obtain a new grip, and by working only in turn to be more effective than ever. Chance and Comiskey were unable to find the right aides for Brown and Walsh, and among the leading pitchers of the year the names of Brown and Walsh are no longer set. In which respect we hand it to Clark Griffith, who refused to work Walter Johnson to death merely because he was the best pitcher on his club, and the only one who was practically sure to win. Griff was wise enough to save the goose and stick content with one golden egg about every four days.

MEN WHOM BASEBALL HAS MADE RICH

Big-Hearted Charles Comiskey, the Hal Chase of the '80s, Who Owns the White Sox and Is Regarded as the Napoleon of the American League. Rich Enough to Be Satisfied.

"COMMY."

Charles Comiskey began playing ball at Dubuque, Ia., in 1879 and today he is the most powerful individual in the American league. He has made a fortune of at least six, if not seven, figures, and he made it in baseball.

It was Comiskey, when owner of the St. Paul club in the Western league, who placed a club in Chicago, without asking the National league's permission, and when that body threatened war "Commy" and his gang twirled their blackthorns, shouted "Hurroo" and waded in.

So adept did they prove at wading that when the smoke cleared away, what was left of the old league was a terribly sick woman, while the American league band continued to play "Garry Owen," the league leaders being Comiskey, Collins, McGraw, Mack, McAleer, Armour, Loftus and Barrow, was excuse enough for the air.

Comiskey's career has been a steady advance. He went from Dubuque to St. Louis and fleshbasd for the "Browns" owned by Chris Von Der Ahe. He revolutionized the position.

In 1887 he became captain and manager of the team and began winning American association pennants. He next went to Cincinnati as manager and later bought the St. Paul franchise, developed the American league from the Western and is today one of the wealthiest men in the game.

Comiskey would have more money than he has if he wasn't so good to so many old friends. It was "Commy" who made comfortable the last days of Von Der Ahe, and if his private check book could be examined it would show that his charity runs to thousands a year.

Comiskey is a "good spender." He entertains handsomely; he takes his White Sox on trans-continental training trips in a private train and does everything upon a large scale. His heart is so big that he is never happier than when making it possible for some one to have a good time.

DAUBERT'S HEIGHT HELP IN TAKING WILD THROWS

Going After a High One Is One of Daubert's Best Assets, He Is Also Good Judge of a Low Ball

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—In Jake Daubert the Brooklyn team has the greatest little animated telescope in baseball today.

Six feet one inch in height, the first-sacker of the Dodgers can, and does, snag many a wild toss, and still manage to keep his foot on the bag, to the general discomfiture of the batsman trying to get in the initial corner. It takes a mighty wild heave to draw Daubert from the bag.

It is figured that Jake can get a throw nine feet from bag when the ball comes to his right, stretching his full length, and still hooking the station with his toe.

Having to reach across his body with his gloved hand when a ball is thrown to the left side of the bag, he naturally loses some distance in nailing these heaves, but he can get those that come within eight feet and two or three inches. Of course, if the worst comes to the worst, the Dodger shoves out his left hand, and, although bare, takes a throw with it, in this way getting the benefit of his nine-foot reach.

When reaching into the diamond for a low heave Daubert has another telescope stunt to do. Of course, he does not have to stretch quite so far to get a low one, for he can judge his ball and take it on the bound if there is time to wait for it.

Going after a high one is one of the best stunts that Daubert pulls. Naturally when the ball is thrown a mile or two over his roof he cannot keep his foot on the bag and get it, but he goes up like an aviator after an altitude record, and the ball has to be ten feet above the ground to get by him safely.

Some admirers of the great first-baseman think that he goes a lot higher than this, but a two-foot leap straight up with the body extended is some hop when it is remembered that the athlete has to take it from a standing start and has not time to prepare for the spring.

Pacific Athletes War Upon New Director

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The appointment by James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union and director general of amateur athletics at the Panama-Pacific International exposition in 1915, of "Tom" Mulvey to be assistant director general has been followed by much resentment here that the Pacific association of the A. A. U., in an open letter signed by President John Elliott, refuses to allow Ralph Rose, George Horine and many others of its members to compete in 1915, if the appointment stands.

At a meeting of the association today, secession of the Pacific coast from the parent body was urged.

"I have no doubt," writes President Elliott, "that Mr. Mulvey is a most estimable gentleman, but he has no knowledge of or affiliations with amateur sport whatsoever."

Both Boxers Beaten Severely During Match

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 9.—George Ashe, of New York, gamely fought off the vicious attacks of Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, for twelve rounds last night and the bout was declared a draw.

Although Dillon made blood flow in the first round he was unable successfully to continue the advantage. Ashe sent Dillon to the floor in the fourth round, but Dillon was on his feet in an instant and carried the display aggressiveness. Both fighters accepted considerable punishment and Ashe was bleeding profusely about the mouth when the final bell sounded.

Old Umpire Dead

Hilton Says Americans Cannot Play Golf

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Harry Vardon, former British golf champion, who with Edward Ray, present British title holder, sailed yesterday for the United States to compete in the American championship is quoted as saying:

"I have played Americans before, and I do not think them very strong. After the blot on the escutcheon of British sport by the loss of the Davis cup tennis matches, we are going to bring home the American title and show them that golf, at least, is really the English-man's game."

Manchester Winner

MANCHESTER, Ga., Aug. 9.—Manchester and Woodbury crossed bats here Monday in an exciting game of ball, the home team winning in the last half of the ninth inning by shoving over a run, making the final score 2 to 1.

The main features were the batting and base running of Irwin, star catch of Woodbury's left fielder, base running of Chappelle and pinch hit of Harris. The pitching was swell on both sides.

Manchester has one of the best teams in this part of the state, and issues a challenge to all comers.

MANUFACTURERS' LEAGUE WILL NOT HAVE GAME

The announcement that the Hallet & Davis and Atlanta National bank teams would play a game Saturday afternoon is in error according to the announcement of Manager Martin, of the Hallet & Davis club.

These two clubs have wound up their regular season and no more games are to be played. The race was a tie between the two clubs and the tie is not to be played off.

WON'T TRY OUT SCHAUER UNTIL FLAG IS COPPED

In Rube Schauer McGraw Believes He Has a Find, but Is Not Willing to Risk Him in Any Regular Games

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—While Manager McGraw has made no comment on his new pitcher, Rube Schauer, he has intimated that the chances of owning another good left-hander for the New York club are very bright. McGraw makes no conclusions on young ball players until he sees them flip the ball in a regular ball game. The New York manager, with the assistance of Robinson, has been coaching the much-touted pitcher from the Superior club of the Northern league. Every day the "Rube" can be found working with Robinson or pitching to the Giant batters, and the New York players say that he has a lot of stuff, and it would not surprise them if he stuck around. Schauer has a lot of speed and a curve ball with it.

The "Rube" will not get the chance to pitch a game until the Giants have the pennant cinched. Then McGraw will send the left handed flinger to work to see what he really can do. McGraw believes that is the test. All ball players breaking into the big league are touted highly. In fact, they are praised above their ability and too much is expected of them when they do show. But it has been whispered about, and not shouted from the house tops, that the new left hander looks the part and will deliver for McGraw.

There is some interesting dope on the new left hander and the following story is told about him:

"Because he was out of a job and signed a baseball contract as a last resort, Rube Schauer went to work for the Superior, Wis., club of the Northern league this spring. Because he cast his fortunes with baseball Schauer determined to pitch his way into a steady berth. As a result he pitched so well and so often that almost single-handed he has landed his club at the top of the Northern league, and his work has resulted in his sale to the New York National League club for the largest amount of money ever paid for a class C player. Only two other players in the history of baseball have ever brought larger sums on the auction block. They were O'Toole, of St. Paul, and Marquard, of Indianapolis.

PLAYED TOWN BALL.

"Schauer was born and reared in a small northern Minnesota town, and has played baseball about as long as the average American youth. He always has been on a country town team until this spring. Never had he received a regular salary until Superior picked him. He was not anxious to play baseball as a means of livelihood, but had ambitions to go to college and take a professional course. Early this spring he was out of a job and his funds were at a low ebb, when Superior tendered him a contract. Unlike most youngsters, he didn't snap at the chance. He hesitated at first, and then refused to give a definite answer for several days. In the meantime he tried to get work more tasteful to him, but failing, he finally put his name to the document, which called for a salary of $110 per month.

"Then he determined to earn his pay, and his record since last April shows how well he succeeded. His first appearance in professional baseball was made in Minneapolis the day the Northwestern league opened on April 23. He worked for two-thirds of an inning in favor of a pinch hitter. The next day he was sent back and allowed only six hits, winning his game 15 to 3, errors robbing him of a shut-out. From then on it was easy sailing. He leads the league in strikeouts, averaging about ten a game. He has pitched three one-hit games, a gang of two and three-hit contests, and was robbed of a no-hit game by a scratch single in the ninth inning.

"He has appeared in more games than any other pitcher in the league, and is a glutton for work. He is a big, strong young fellow, and would work every day if given a chance. He stands about six feet tall, and weighs 180 pounds.

"The day after his sale to the Giants he signalized his rise to fame by beating Rube Waddell, now with the Virginia (Minn.) club. Schauer struck out ten men in seven innings against Waddell."

In the meantime the Giants are thundering along and winning as they please. The only thing that can stop them now is a railroad wreck or deaths due to heat in St. Louis.

The Giants never looked to be stronger in pitching, and they are hitting the ball and running bases. Looking the situation right in the eye, the club is doing everything a club in first place does. As they stand right now, we might say "Pretty soft for those Giants."

$1,000 FOR THE FLAG

Richard Tillis yesterday offered the members of the Montgomery baseball team a bonus of $1,000 if they win the pennant this season.

The team representing Montgomery this year has the best chance for the pennant that any other team that this city has ever had. All of the pitchers are going well and with the addition to the staff of Allison, the Gulls, the Crackers and the Barons will have to travel at a rapid rate to even keep up with the Montgomery club.

While the Crackers and the Barons are playing the closing month on their home grounds and the Montgomery team will be playing on the road, they have nothing on the Montgomery team, as they play just as good ball and sometimes better on the road than they do at home.

The $1,000 offered by Mr. Tillis will be divided between all the players on the team, and while it won't be any great amount, still it is something, and the players will work all the harder now for this extra money.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Griffin Club Winner In Jackson Games

GRIFFIN, Ga., Aug. 9.—Griffin defeated Jackson in three pretty games of ball last week. The first game was 8 to 4 in favor of Jackson. The second one went to Griffin by the score of 6 to 1. Nutt, of Jackson, pitched good ball, but was unable to do anything with the hard-hitting Griffin team. Bunn, for Griffin, pitched good ball, striking out eleven men and not allowing the Jackson boys but one scratch hit.

The third game was the best ever seen in Jackson. Sauls, for Griffin, was opposed by Coombs, and shut Jackson out by the score of 6 to 0. Coombs, the ex-Southern leaguer, was hit hard by the Griffin boys. The feature of the third game was the fast fielding of Morrison and Cochran, for Griffin. The last game went to Griffin by the score of 8 to 7. Bowden, of Jackson, pitched the first and the last games for Jackson. He won one and lost one. He had the Griffin bunch at his mercy until the ninth inning, when the visitors got to landing on his benders and made three runs, which defeated the Jackson boys.

Buena Vista Takes Two From Columbus Y. M. C. A.

BUENA VISTA, Ga., Aug. 9.—Buena Vista won a double-header from Columbus Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon. Scores, 4 to 3 and 7 to 1. Mosley pitched both games for Buena Vista, allowing six hits in the first, with eleven strikeouts, and four hits in the second, with seven strikeouts.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Columbus.....011 100 0— 3 6 2
Buena Vista...100 210 *— 4 6 1

Batteries: Smith and Hunter; Mosley and Huggins.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Columbus.....000 100 0— 1 4 3
Buena Vista...322 000 *— 7 9 1

Buena Vista has not lost a series this season, having played 26 and won 20. They have defeated some of the strongest teams in the state, including West Point and Montezuma.

SEVEN YOUNGSTERS STAR AMONG PITCHERS OF 1913

Plump the single-barreled question at any manager of intelligence and a strict regard for the truth something after this fashion:

"What's the toughest place you have to fill?"

And back will come the managerial response, "Gimme the pitchers."

That's the direction in which every manager is bending his energies now—to secure a supply of young men who will be competent hurlists to take the places of the brigade of veterans whose presence in the news will soon be largely confined to the annual October reunions known as the world's series.

When the eight clubs bossed by bulky Ban Johnson started the season they were shattered with pitchers. Of those groups toted about the country for various periods only seven have advanced to the role of stars. Of the seven not one is a highpriced individual, and all of them were overlooked when the glowing tales of camp life in the spring were spread before bugdom.

The residential districts which these young successful hurlers populate, together with their identies, reads something after this fashion:

Washington—Joe Boehling and Joe Engle.
Athletics—Leslie Bush.
Chicago—Clarence Albert Russell.
Detroit—George Dauss.
St. Louis—Albert Leverenz.
New York—Raymond Keating.

In the dpazzling career of the brotherhood one reads striking tales such as only the truthful epics of our pastime can depict. None of tehse lads was weighed in the golden scales of reputation. None of them added to the high cost of living by bringing prices that were golden and gigantic. They all trotted along on their own efforts and won their way to the front because they had the stuff, as the delicate and illuminative parlance of our national frolic terms it.

Americans in Close Finish

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 9.—American and Canadian oarsmen divided honors in the first day of the forty-first annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen held in the Charles River basin.

Chief interest centered in the trial heats of the association senior singles. R. Dibble, the sensational oarsman from the D. O. H. Rowing club of Toronto, and J. B. Kelley, from the Vesper Boat club of Philadelphia, each won his heat in easy fashion. Dibble's time was faster than that of his American rival. The winner of tomorrow's final will be entitled to compete later in the day in the championship singles for amateur championship of the country.

Dibble won the quarter-mile championship. The closest finish of the day came in the senior quadruple sculls, in which Riverside of Boston, beat out Union, also of Boston, by six feet.

At the annual meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen the old board of officers was re-elected without change, headed by James Pilkington, of New York, as president.

RENEWED BEAR PRESSURE CAUSED BREAK IN COTTON

Market in New York Closed 13 to 20 Points Down from the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A cheerful view of southwestern weather probabilities seemed especially to increase cotton offerings this morning. First prices were barely steady, with August 8 points higher, other months 8 to 11 lower. Active months sold 8 to 9 lower right after the call. There was some trade buying at the decline, but the market was unsettled. Early advices confirmed reports of rains at Galveston and a little precipitation in the Texas panhandle, but otherwise dry weather in both Texas and Oklahoma.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Cotton futures opened steady at a decline of 6 to 8 points on poor cables and rains in the central portions of the cotton region, which many traders thought were likely to extend to the other states over Sunday. Offerings were fairly well absorbed, chiefly by shorts who were desirous of evening up against the week-end, and the market had a steady undertone in the early trading. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 7 to 8 points under the last quotations.

The forecast of cloudy and unsettled weather for the western belt was fulfilled today, and the peril of warnings for the Texas coast was the result of a disturbance moving northward which will cause selling to increase from the middle of the morning on, and prices gave way under the pressure to sales of 7 to 8 points at profit-taking by sellers of the earlier part of the week. The official reports noted no rain of consequence in either Texas or Oklahoma, and crop accounts from these states continued in a reasonably fair vein, but had no sustaining influence on prices. At the lowest of the day the market was 15 to 17 points under yesterday's last quotations.

WORLD'S VISIBLE SUPPLY STATEMENT

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton, made up from special cable and telegraphic advices, compares the figures of this week with last week, and the same week for the past five years, shows a decrease for the week just closed of 254,621 against a decrease of 187,797 last year, and a decrease of 110,688 for the two weeks.

The total visible is 2,361,382, against 2,586,-203 last week, 2,297,203 two weeks ago, and 1,625,763 year before last. Of this total of American cotton, it is 1,734,382, against 1,910,200 last week, 1,458,076 last year and 732,363 year before last, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, etc., 1,207,000, against 1,287,000 last week, 859,000 last year and 893,000 year before last.

The total world's visible supply of cotton as above shows a decrease under last week's figures of 254,621, an increase compared with last year of 63,567, and an increase compared wit hyear before last of 736,619.

Of the world's visible supply of cotton as above there is now afloat and held in Great Britain and continental Europe 1,291,000, against 1,467,000 last week, 1,208,000 year before last, and in Egypt 81,000, against 44,000 last year and 65,000 year before last; in India 726,000, against 696,000 last year and 463,000 year before last, and in the United States 254,000, against 291,000 last year and 211,000 year before last.

THE ERIE RAILROAD.

BY JOHN M. OSKISON

The Erie railroad expects before the end of 1915 to have a double-track line all the way from New York to Chicago. In the last few years that road has all but completed a job of regrading, straightening, cutting through hills, filling across valleys and general reconstruction which is said to be bigger than the job of building the Panama canal.

This has been done during the presidency of a man of exceptional ability, Frederick D. Underwood began his railroad experience as a clerk, then became a brakeman, and rose through all grades of practical railway service to become head of the system in 1901. One of his able brothers rose to the position of general manager of the St. Paul system in 1904.

At the beginning of the reconstruction period Erie was a physical wreck and its load of bonds was so heavy that the real question how long the road could keep out of the hands of a receiver. In 1903, when the panic had struck the road hardest, when it needed money most, improvement of its road and the purchase of cars and engines most urgently, and when traffic was hard to get, the Erie passed through its last crisis.

When the new double track is in use it is expected that the Erie will be a highly successful competitor with the very best roads which run between New York and Chicago. They say that the system is pulling farther and farther away from possible bankruptcy.

All of this makes good reading for those who have held Erie bonds and stock. Erie and seen them sink in price until they resembled the common stocks of a wildcat mining company.

Investors who are equipped with the faculty of looking into the future ought to buck down for investigation Erie bonds. There are eight or nine different issues, and in the list are bonds which are of undoubted investment worth.

It is more than a hope now that in another ten years the disgraceful financial history of Erie will be only history—it will be buried down in its past so far as the investor is concerned.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times Democrat says: This is the season when the professional bear is said to be active in the cotton market, and extended dry weather in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas at this time has given him no little. High price people do not accept the sensational damage reports that are coming in from time to time, but on the contrary, they say there is much exaggeration. Newspaper correspondents supply reasons to believe that important damage is being done, and that serious damage will result in the event rains do not materialize in the next few days. On the other hand, big crop people assert with confidence that there is no abnormal dryness in the west, that high temperatures are not unusual for July, and rain record thus far this season is better than that of last year. In other words, the conservative bull argument is that we should have normal depreciation from an excellent condition, but not taken, as the bear crop reports have thinks nothing more than normal depreciation from such excellent condition has occurred. Extreme bulls credit the report showing an alarming character. Thus, while the market is fluctuating within a wide limit the frame of mind and reems less worried than several weeks ago.

According to the Journal of Commerce, cotton goods trade is on the verge of broad activity, but fairly delay will be dangerous. The retail trade has been in the market in large numbers during the week, and supplies ample reason

Proper Houses For Chickens In The South

THE suitable poultry buildings for different sections of country have been one question probably harder to solve than anything connected with the poultry business. Nearly everyone has their ideas and in nearly every section of country different conditions confront the breeder, and there is such a vast difference of ideas among people that this question of proper houses for poultry has been one thing hard to solve. Nearly every man has his own idea and you can not usually change him from same. Millions of dollars have been spent in poultry houses and yards unnecessarily and many of these buildings have been abandoned without ever returning an income of a reasonable per cent on the investment, while many have been made to pay well. After a life time's experience in this business I still find a great many disadvantages over certain kinds of buildings and have yet to see a perfect poultry house, but I am more convinced than ever that too much money is usually wasted in erecting poultry buildings and not enough capacity is secured for the amount invested in ninety-five per cent of the poultry buildings erected, especially in the south.

The first thing a person should have in view in putting up a poultry house is to make it convenient to attend to your chickens, and where a person has ever had to do the work of caring for thousands of birds himself this will be the first thing he will have in view and only can be appreciated by one who has had to care for thousands of birds himself. The next important thing is to construct the building so as to make it comfortable twelve months of the year for the chickens who have to inhabit it, and of course to construct the building so as to house the largest possible number of fowls so that they will be comfortable and healthy and accomplish as much as possible with a little labor is the main thing to look out for. In building poultry houses you can apply the same thing to different structures as is done with the ordinary dwelling for people. You will scarcely ever find two houses exactly alike. However, there are thousands of homes that satisfy the people who occupy them and are built on all lines. It is seldom that we ever have in the south weather cold enough to hurt our chickens or stop them from scratching except they roost out in the open or that is in a temperature where they are not closed up tight but protected from the draughts and winds, and the system can be accustomed to the temperature indoors at night practically the same that it is outside by constructing the house so as to have this your chickens will never stop laying during the sudden changeable weather in the winter time, and to get these results the houses should be closed tight on the back and covered with tar paper. On both ends there should be some windows to admit the sun early in the morning and late in the afternoon from the east, also from the west. On the front side it should be planked up at least three feet high from floor with windows every ten to fifteen feet so as to admit sunlight in on the floor early in the morning, and a three to four foot wire screen should be placed the back way up on the front of the building. This will admit sun nearly all through the day on all parts of the floor in your building.

Yours very truly,

Geo. Lee

MAYOR PUTS THE BRAKES ON CITY'S EXPENDITURES

Urges Finance Committee Not to Appropriate Unless Money Is in Sight

At the call of Mayor Woodward, the finance committee of the city held an executive session at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in the mayor's office. It had been stated that the committee was to take up the dispute between the park board and Dan Carey over an expenditure of $800, but Mayor Woodward declared that matter was not mentioned at all.

The mayor stated that he called the committee together to warn them not to make obligations unless they had the money for the appropriations, the recent adding of $13,229.74 to the June apportionment sheet prompting the mayor to advise with the committee.

"The city," said Mayor Woodward, "is $700,000 in debt, and I propose that we shall have a clean balance sheet at the end of my term. And I do not propose to approve the expenditure of a dollar unless the funds are in sight. I merely wanted to inform the committee of my attitude, and to ask that they look to the future when making appropriations."

The meeting was perfectly amicable, said the mayor, and he was thoroughly satisfied as to the additional $13,226.74.

W. R. Daley, president of the board of education, went to the meeting to ask for an appropriation of $800 for connecting up sewerage at the Battle Hill school.

Owing to the fact that the committee held an executive session, Colonel Daley did not secure admission, though one of the committee came out to hear what he had to say.

"The sanitary department," said Colonel Daley, "has ordered that the school be connected with the city sewerage, and we have no funds with which to make the connections."

The matter will come before council at its next meeting, according to the mayor.

ORGAN CONCERT FOR VISITING DELEGATES

A distinctly light and popular program for the benefit of the visiting merchants and manufacturers will be rendered at the free organ concert Sunday afternoon, by Charles A. Sheldon, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival association.

A wonderful series of variations on the melody, "Old Folks at Home," will be a striking feature of the program. Then will be a brilliant military march, a composition of Harry Rowe Shelley's, with imitative passages of trumpet and drums. Another special feature will be Nevin's "A Day in Venice." The only piece of classical music on the program will be the Prelude to Lohengrin ,a composition whose beautiful harmonies appeal to all ears.

A special invitation is extended to the out-of-town folks who are attending the merchants and manufacturers' gathering ,and in fact to all visitors the concert is free.

MEDICAL PRACTICE BILL IS PASSED BY THE SENATE

Makes Sweeping Regulations and Will Stop Quackery, It Is Claimed

The medical practice bill as amended by the house passed the senate by a unanimous vote Saturday. The bill was introduced in the senate some time ago by Senators Richardson and Longino and passed. It was then sent to the house, where, after certain amendments, it was passed Friday. All that is needed now to make it a law is the governor's signature.

The bill carries sweeping regulations of the practice of medicine in Georgia. Its advocates claim it is aimed mainly against quacks, and is for the protection of public health.

The bill provides for a state board of medical examiners composed of ten members, five of whom shall be allopaths, three electics and two homeopaths. No doctor may practice in this state without first applying to the board, but this does not apply to present practitioners.

The salaries of the board are to be paid from a fee of $20 to be assessed each candidate coming before the board. The members of the board shall be selected by the governor. The requisites for membership are to have practiced five years in Georgia and not to be connected with any medical college. The governor is to select the board within thirty days after the passage of the bill, and they are to elect their president, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

Under this bill Christian Scientists can practice in the state, but cannot accept fees. The bill also authorizes the board to bar physicians who are given to intemperance or the use of narcotics; also those who perform criminal operations or promise to cure incurable diseases.

Any doctor who practices in violation of the provisions under which this board is instituted shall be punished for a misdemeanor, and be liable to a fine of $500 to $1,000 or imprisonment from two to five years.

The senate Saturday morning passed the Hixon bill providing for the sanitation of bakeries, canneries, butcher shops, stables and other food producing concerns, by a vote of 34 to 4. The bill provided to keep such places in a sanitary condition, in order to prevent the spread of disease.

The bill carries with it no provision for appropriation, but simply gives inspectors already employed by communities the power to better enforce the cleanliness of all places where food is kept in the open and to require that flies are not allowed to infest it.

The sentiment of the majority of the senators was summed up when Senator Stark said that the reason he wanted the bill was because he "didn't want to eat germs." Senators Harrell, Kea, McGregor, and Olliff voted against it, claiming that it would be a law impossible to enforce in the rural communities.

The senate passed the resolution of Senator Olliff asking the United States congress to appropriate funds for preserving old Fort Frederica on St. Simon's island.

The house bill providing commission government for the city of Rome was passed by the senate, and now only needs the signature of the governor to become a law.

*The senate passed Senator Mc-*Neil's bill requiring all railroads to erect open bridges at public crossings. he bill making it a misdemeanor for a person to issue a check when he has no funds in bank to meet it, was under discussion when the senate adjourned at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It will get up again at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

State Confronts Holloway With Previous Affidavit

Darley left, and that Frank was gone about 40 minutes?"

"Well, that was all guess work."

"You put your name to this statement, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Then you did say that?"

"Yes."

"Well, why do you say now that he left there at 9:30?"

"I didn't recollect the time exactly."

"Your recollection ought to have been better than now, oughtn't it?"

Mr. Arnold objected, declaring that the question about his recollection was not relevant or material.

WITNESS GROWS CROSS.

"I want him to give to this jury a reasonable explanation of why he read over and signed this paper stating one thing, and now comes and swears to another story."

"Your memory is better now, isn't it?" inquired the solicitor of the witness.

"Not a bit," growled the witness.

"Who did you say about getting a reward for turning up Conley?"

"I never said anything of the kind!" snouted the witness.

"Well, what did you say about it?"

"A day or two after he was arrested I told Black or some of the detectives that this negro was convicted he is my negro."

"And you knew all about this $1,500 reward that newspapers were publishing?"

"I certainly did."

"When were you accustomed to leave the factory on Saturdays?"

"Generally about 4:30 o'clock."

"Didn't you tell me that if there were girls in the factory on Saturday afternoon that you would be in a position to know it because you remained there until about 5 o'clock; Didn't you say '3 o'clock,' Mr. Holloway?"

TRAPS HIM AGAIN.

"If I said 3, I meant 4."

"If you mean 4, what did you mean just now when you said 4:30?"

The witness said that was a slip of the tongue.

"I asked you, Mr. Holloway, didn't it, if you were ever away from the factory on Saturdays, holidays or otherwise?"

"I meant 4 o'clock on Saturdays except holidays."

"And you told me that negroes did work in the factory on Saturday afternoons up to 12 months ago?"

"Yes."

"How long has Conley been there?"

"About two years."

"Did he work regularly, along up to April 26?"

"Except when he was in the stockade for 30 days."

"How long ago since he was in the stockade?"

"Last year some time."

"What was Jim's number at the factory?"

"I have forgotten."

FORGETS CONLEY'S NUMBER.

"Do you mean to tell me that you, the man that kept the time of the employes, have forgotten the number of a man who has been working there for two years?"

"Yes, sir."

"Oh, it was No. 71, wasn't it, Mr. Holliday?" asked the solicitor, manifesting much patience.

"I don't know."

"You won't swear that it wasn't?"

"No, sir."

Obtaining a number of factory time slips from Attorney Arnold, Mr. Dorsey handed them to the witness, commanding: "Mr. Holloway, take those slips and point out the record of No. 71. You say you keep close tabs on those factory employes. How did you do so if you didn't know their numbers?"

The witness did not reply. He was unrolling the time slips. The solicitor again directed him to indicate on the time slips the registrations by No. 71. After a moment of hesitation, the witness said: "I ain't got my glasses and I can't see without them."

Solicitor Dorsey took the time slips back and laid them on the table.

"You are sure Jim Conley worked steadily for fully sixty days prior to April 26, and that he registered every day?"

"No, sir. No. He registered every morning. Sometimes he registered at dinner time. Sometimes he didn't. Sometimes he failed to register at night."

"You admit that Walter Pride worked frequently on Saturdays, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"He's a negro too, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

SAYS DOOR WAS OPEN.

"Did you say that on Monday after the murder you noticed that the door leading from the pencil factory entrance into the woodenware company's place was open?"

"Yes, it was."

"Why Mr. Holloway wasn't that area in front of the door piled up with all sorts of boxes?"

"There were four or five cases there."

"There was such a large pile of boxes you couldn't see the door, wasn't it?"

"I could see the door. There was some boxes piled there."

"Why, these boxes were piled all the way around from the steps toward the elevator and in front of the door, weren't they?"

"I could see the door, all right."

"Who nailed that door up?"

"I did, on Monday."

"Was that before or after Darley nailed it up Mr. Holloway? He said he nailed it up three or four days after the murder."

"Monday, Mr. Darley told me to get my hammer and nails and nail up the door. We never let that door stand open."

"Mr. Holloway, on this Monday everything at the factory was in a turmoil; officers were going through the factory; business was at a standstill. Now, do you mean to say that with this state of affairs, you nailed up the door?"

"Yes."

"Darley told you to nail it up?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't this door open because the officers were looking around the factory building?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't they open it?"

"I don't know. It might have been opened on Sunday. It was not open on Saturday, I know, when I left the factory. It was nailed up then."

"On Saturday, boxes were piled up all around and in front of it, weren't there?"

"There were five or six boxes piled there."

The solicitor continued to grill the witness.

"Don't fancy ladies sometimes wear shoes with white tops when there's snow on the ground? Don't fancy ladies wear anything?"

Mr. Arnold objected on the ground that the witness was not qualified as an expert. Mr. Dorsey said that Mr. Arnold had questioned him along the same line, and waived the question, after saying that "fancy ladies" were the kind he contended entered the factory on Saturday afternoons.

"And you told me that negroes did work on Saturday afternoons up to 12 months ago?"

"Yes."

"How long has Conley been there?"

"About two years."

"Did he work regularly, along up to April 26?"

"Except when he was in the stockade for 30 days."

"How long ago since he was in the stockade?"

"Last year some time."

"What was Jim's number at the factory?"

"I have forgotten."

FORGETS CONLEY'S NUMBER.

"Do you mean to tell me that you, the man that kept the time of the employes, have forgotten the number of a man who has been working there for two years?"

"Yes, sir."

"Oh, it was No. 71, wasn't it, Mr. Holliday?" asked the solicitor, manifesting much patience.

"I don't know."

"You won't swear that it wasn't?"

"No, sir."

Obtaining a number of factory time slips from Attorney Arnold, Mr. Dorsey handed them to the witness, commanding: "Mr. Holloway, take those slips and point out the record of No. 71. You say you keep close tabs on those factory employes. How did you do so if you didn't know their numbers?"

The witness did not reply. He was unrolling the time slips. The solicitor again directed him to indicate on the time slips the registrations by No. 71. After a moment of hesitation, the witness said: "I ain't got my glasses and I can't see without them."

Solicitor Dorsey took the time slips back and laid them on the table.

"You are sure Jim Conley worked steadily for fully sixty days prior to April 26, and that he registered every day?"

"No, sir. No. He registered every morning. Sometimes he registered at dinner time. Sometimes he didn't. Sometimes he failed to register at night."

"You admit that Walter Pride worked frequently on Saturdays, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"He's a negro too, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

SAYS DOOR WAS OPEN.

"Did you say that on Monday after the murder you noticed that the door leading from the pencil factory entrance into the woodenware company's place was open?"

"Yes, it was."

"Why Mr. Holloway wasn't that area in front of the door piled up with all sorts of boxes?"

"There were four or five cases there."

"There was such a large pile of boxes you couldn't see the door, wasn't it?"

"I could see the door. There was some boxes piled there."

"Why, these boxes were piled all the way around from the steps toward the elevator and in front of the door, weren't they?"

"I could see the door, all right."

"Who nailed that door up?"

"I did, on Monday."

"Was that before or after Darley nailed it up Mr. Holloway? He said he nailed it up three or four days after the murder."

"Monday. Mr. Darley told me to get my hammer and nails and nail up the door. We never let that door stand open."

"Mr. Holloway, on this Monday everything at the factory was in a turmoil; officers were going through the factory; business was at a standstill. Now, do you mean to say that with this state of affairs, you nailed up the door?"

"Yes."

"Darley told you to nail it up?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't this door open because the officers were looking around the factory building?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't they open it?"

"I don't know. It might have been opened on Sunday. It was not open on Saturday, I know, when I left the factory. It was nailed up then."

"On Saturday, boxes were piled up all around and in front of it, weren't there?"

"There were five or six boxes piled there."

The solicitor continued to grill the witness.

"Don't fancy ladies sometimes wear shoes with white tops when there's snow on the ground? Don't fancy ladies wear anything?"

Mr. Arnold objected on the ground that the witness was not qualified as an expert. Mr. Dorsey said that Mr. Arnold had questioned him along the same line, and waived the question, after saying that "fancy ladies" were the kind he contended entered the factory on Saturday afternoons.

"And you told me that negroes did work in the factory
